Brown Put On Stand in Butler Case

Former Sheriff's Aide Appears for Plaintiff, Mrs. Gadd in Damage Case Describes Scene

Brown Tells Position of Car Upon His Arrival

Arthur Brown, former deputy sheriff who made an investigation of the accident last October 12, 1940, in which Raymond Gadd of this city was fatally injured in a crash at the Higginsville bridge just outside the city on Route 28, was called as a plaintiff witness this morning in the $100,000 action brought by Mrs. Gadd against Edward Butler and the Universal Road Machinery Company.

The car in which Gadd was riding was owned by the company and had been operated by Butler, an employee.

Mr. Brown said he had gone to the scene to photograph the car and the scene described the position of the car on arrival. He said the left front door was open when he arrived and the left side of the car was badly damaged. He was unable to tell whether the right door of the cab was open or not.

Mr. Brown told of going to the hospital during the investigation and seeing Butler there. He said Butler seemed dazed and unable to talk but he said Butler appeared to him to be sober.

It has been charged that Butler was intoxicated and had allowed Gadd to drive the car. The defense claims that Gadd was driving the car when it crashed.

Doesn't Recall Order

Brown could not recall ordering a blood test of Butler made but he said he knew one was made. After attempts to talk to Butler at the hospital failed he said he left. Butler was unable to answer questions at the hospital and was dazed and under treatment for the injuries which he suffered. Brown said in his opinion he did not believe Butler was intoxicated.

Robert Boyle, proprietor of the City Hall Grill, was called and said he was a member of the party which went to Fisher's Tavern at West Hurley with a party of five in which Gadd was a member.

Boyle said Gadd and the others had had a few beers at his place and later more at West Hurley but he said neither Gadd nor Butler were intoxicated. He heard no talk of Gadd driving the car back to Kingston for Butler. He denied seeing Gadd have the keys to the Butler car. Gadd and Butler were both in the tavern when he left for Kingston. Later he learned of the accident and went to the scene. Butler was out of the car when he arrived and was leaning against the car. Gadd was on the pavement some distance to the rear of the truck which had struck the abutment to the bridge.

Cross examined, Boyle said there was a debate in the tavern at West Hurley between two couples who had been dancing and Butler. They were still there when he left the tavern. Butler was sober when he left.

Thomas Feeney, another member of the party which went to West Hurley with Gadd, was called. He said Gadd had several beers during the evening but was not intoxicated. He heard no talk of Butler allowing Gadd to drive the car home. He said he had not seen Butler asleep in his truck at the tavern. He said the two couples came out when he did and he talked for a few moments with one of the men on the road. Where Butler or Gadd was then he did not know. He and his party left Gadd at the tavern and came home.

Next he saw Gadd and Butler at the scene of the crash. Butler was being helped to walk at the scene of the crash by someone when he arrived at the scene. Asked on cross examination whether he could say Butler was intoxicated, he said he could not. He knew he had had several beers during the night at the tavern.

The action was continued this afternoon.

The second $100,000 action to be tried in Supreme Court before Justice William Murray at this May trial term was taken up Monday when Mrs. Grace A. Gadd, as administratrix of the estate of her husband, Raymond Gadd, brought an action against the Universal Road Machinery Co. of this city and Edward J. Butler to recover.

Connelly Is Given Position on City Selectee Board

Henry C. Connelly, retired drugist of 2 Presidents Place, has been named as a successor to former Chief of Police J. Allan Wood as a member of the Kingston Selective Service Board. Mr. Connelly was selected by Mayor C. J. Heiselman, who announced Mr. Connelly's selection today.

Mr. Connelly was head of the Connelly Drug Company on lower Broadway for many years, and some time ago, deciding to retire from an active business life, sold the business to Carl Weber, who is operating the store in connection with his other drug store on Broadway, near Abel street. Mr. Connelly is a cousin of Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes.

During the many years that Mr. Connelly was engaged in the drug business in the downtown business section he became widely and favorably known.

Former Chief Wood, whose place he has taken on the draft board, filed his resignation recently with the mayor and it was announced yesterday.

Barkley Reports British Receive Lease-Lend Arms

Makes Statement in Reply to Convoys Questions; Situation Is Now in Hand, He Says

Washington, May 20 (AP)—Senator Barkley of Kentucky, the administration leader, said today that lease-lend war equipment "seems to be reaching Great Britain satisfactorily."

Barring a change in the situation, he added, it was unlikely that the government would take any new "affirmative steps" to see that the goods are delivered.

"Of course," the senator told reporters, "the situation could change completely over a week-end. Right now, however, indications are that the goods are getting across and conditions are not acute."

Barkley made his statement in response to questions about the possible use of convoys. He and other legislative leaders discussed the foreign situation with President Roosevelt yesterday.

The Kentucky senator said that the government would keep a close watch on the progress of Franco-German "collaboration," and added that "of course it would be necessary for us to take some action if Germany sought to establish herself on Martinique or other French possessions in this hemisphere."

He said that although the original armistice terms between France and Germany had prevented Nazi control of the western hemisphere possession, this arrangement might be superseded by the new "collaboration" agreement.

There was speculation that President Roosevelt soon might send Congress a special message on the international situation.

Barkley said that the Chief Executive had not decided whether a message would be sent, but added that if one were it would not request legislation.

Best informed opinion was that the Chief Executive might transmit, without comment, a factual report on recent foreign developments, reviewing the trend toward closer "collaboration" between Germany and France, and the hostilities in the middle east.

U. S. Will Get Its Thanksgiving Back

President Declares 1940's Trial Was Failure

Washington, May 20 (AP)—President Roosevelt declared today that the experiment of moving up the date of Thanksgiving Day by a week to improve retail business had not worked and that next year Thanksgiving would be on the customary last Thursday in November.

This year, however, it will fall on the next to the last Thursday by presidential proclamation.

His Name Is Secret

Hollywood, May 20 (AP)—Luise Rainer, film actress, twice winner of a movie "Oscar" for the best performance by an actress, and just divorced from Playwright Clifford Odets, said today she would remarry soon. "But I cannot tell you his name."

All Aboard Zamzam Are Safe, Nazis Say, in Report About Sinking

Passengers and Crew Are Taken to German Area; Ship Had 'Contraband'

Berlin, May 20 (AP)—The 8,229-ton Egyptian passenger liner Zamzam has been sunk by the German navy—presumably by a surface raider—and the 322 passengers and crewmen, including 138 Americans, are safe in German-occupied territory, authorized Germans reported today.

(The sinking, seemingly, occurred many days ago—the Germans did not say when—for the trip from the South Atlantic lane she was following to the nearest German-held territory is a long one of itself.)

(The Zamzam left Recife, Brazil, for Capetown, Union of South Africa, on April 9, expecting a 14-day crossing. Her departure from New York was on March 20.

(France, it appeared, was the likeliest territory for the landing of passengers and crew. Presumably they were taken there by the victorious raider or an auxiliary.)

Authorized sources said simply that those from the Egyptian motorship were "safe and well cared for in German-occupied territory."

"The vessel was destroyed with the most exacting regard for all international agreements," a spokesman said.

"The ship carried contraband intended for the enemy. German naval units observed every regulation in meeting the situation."

According to Regulations

"It might be called a perfect example of the war on sea commerce carried out according to regulations."

(The ship was carrying 24 American ambulance drivers and 20 ambulances from New York to Alexandria for service with the British and "free French" forces in Africa. In all, 138 Americans were aboard.)

Germans quoted the American and British press in which the sinking of the ship was called an instance of Nazi barbarism at the beginning of unrestricted sea warfare.

"The facts show that it was anything but the kind, indeed it was an instance of the most humane and legal destruction of a vessel which was bringing most valuable supplies to the enemy," a spokesman said.

The Germans did not say where in occupied territory the crew and passengers were taken. Nor would they say where the sinking occurred.

To a question whether the Zamzam was destroyed by U-boat, the spokesman said "it's hardly to be assumed that a submarine could take hundreds of survivors aboard."

The Germans added nothing to reports abroad that the Zamzam carried men and equipment of a British-American ambulance unit. It was stated, however, that the most careful inquiry established that the ship was loaded with large quantities of goods listed as contraband.

It was understood here that war materials aboard were intended for General Charles de Gaulle's "Free French" forces, probably in some colony.

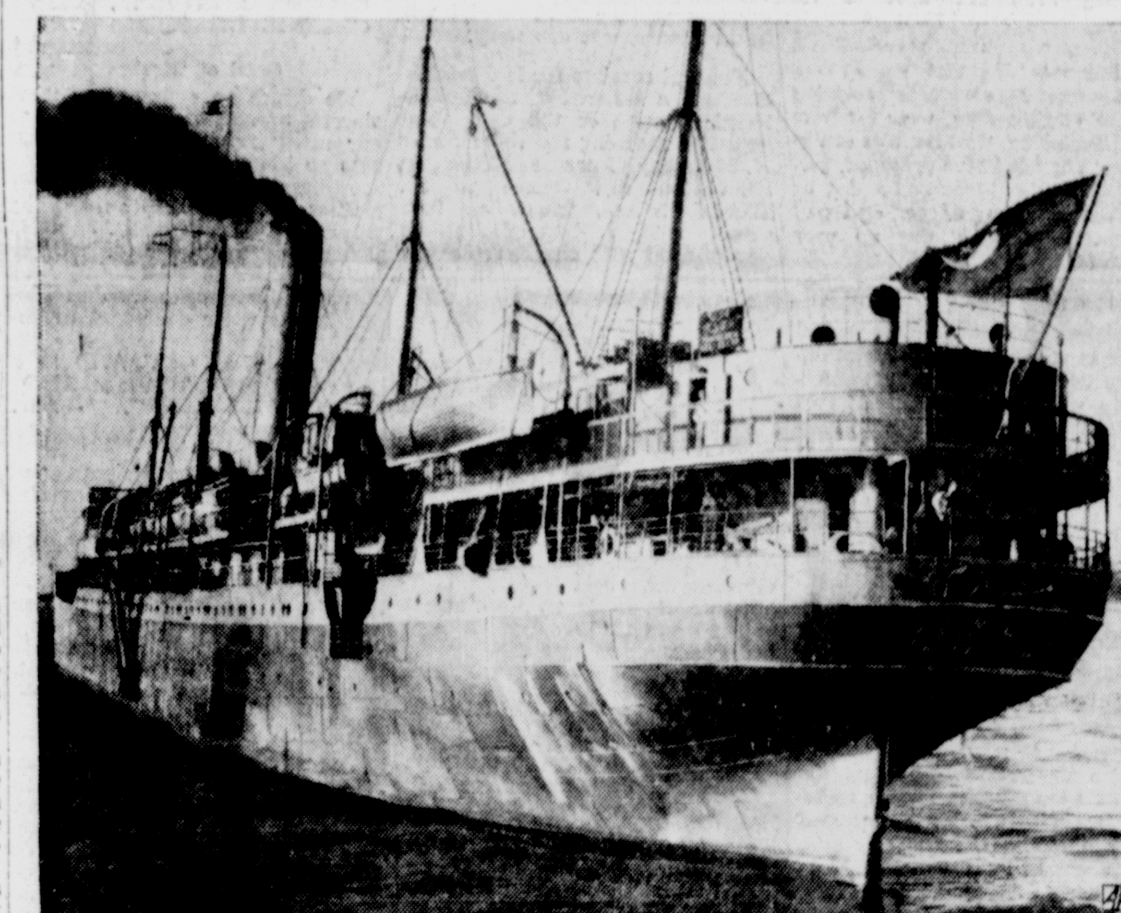

"The excited comment in Anglo-Saxon lands (over the Zamzam) is a fine example of irresponsible war agitation without regard to facts," one source said.

In New York Thomas Cook and Sons, passenger agents for the Zamzam, announced they received a message from their Cairo office this morning stating: "Understand Captain Smith safe. Hope advise you shortly."

The agency said it was its custom to use the names of Captains instead of the names of ships in messages and that this message therefore would mean to them that the Zamzam itself was safe.

Wilson Declares German's Supply Of Oil Is at Ebb

O. P. M. Official Thinks if British Bomb Nazi Plants War Will Be Decided

Chicago, May 20 (AP)—A government petroleum expert declared today that Axis oil supplies were so low that England, without invading Europe, might win by bombing Germany's "vital spot"—her synthetic oil plants and transportation lines.

Dr. Robert E. Wilson, head petroleum consultant of the Office of Production Management, made the assertion in a speech prepared for delivery before the American Institute of Chemical Engineers here.

Dr. Wilson said the German-Italian war effort was being fueled with a total petroleum production, including imports and synthetic output, "equal to only five per cent of this country's production of 'crude.'"

The Washington man said it was hard to predict whether the shortage would hamper Axis military operations this summer, but listed several ways in which the Reich's oil shortage was "surely working against her for the long pull."

"First, Italy, due only partly to lack of oil, will be more of a

Crawford Says U. S. Must Give 'Hypo' to Bond Drive

U-Boats' Chief Interest Is Oil Nazis Are Concentrating on British Tankers

Washington, May 20 (AP)—Rep. Crawford (R., Mich.) charged today that the government's "save-for-defense" bond-selling campaign was lagging badly and he predicted that compulsory measures would be necessary for its success.

A member of the House banking committee, Crawford asserted flatly that without some form of coercion, not even $750,000,000 of the bonds would be sold monthly, whereas the treasury program calls for a billion-a-month quota.

(Secretary Morgenthau reported that the treasury sold $216,845,000 worth of defense bonds and savings stamps during the first two weeks of May.)

After the campaign opened May 1, Crawford told newsmen, the first ten days were "fairly good," but since then the sales had dropped off materially. He based that statement on information he said came from a variety of financial sources.

If the government wanted to get the general public to put savings into defense bonds, he contended, it would ultimately be

Pact With Japan Would Hasten End Of Two Conflicts

Russian Report Suggests Diplomacy Might Place U. S. in Better Spot in Far East

By DEWITT MACKENZIE (Freeman Special News Service)

What might have been the big news of the day, but didn't so develop, was the report published in the Russian press yesterday to the effect that the United States had taken the initiative in seeking a Far Eastern accord with Japan, this to include American mediation of the China-Japanese war.

Maybe the story was a trial balloon blown by somebody; perhaps it was another of those things which grow out of wishful thinking somewhere. In any event it is without confirmation.

It would be difficult, as it strikes me, to figure out an event within the realm of likelihood which would have a greater effect on the European conflict—and consequently on the destiny of our own country—than a rapprochement between the United States and Japan.

This being so, it certainly merits consideration. As a matter of fact, the Russian item impels me to report in this column a thought which has been running through my mind insistently for days, to wit:

This is the appointed hour for the United States and Japan to settle their differences, if they are going to.

Study of the complicated Far Eastern situation over a long period leads me to feel that events now have rounded into such a position that the two countries could find a basis for agreement. What is needed is for an understanding diplomacy to provide an opening for a conference.

Must Shorten War

Success not only would unravel the tangle in the Orient and wind up the bloody business in China but must inevitably shorten the European war, or so it seems to me.

That is the theme of today's column—not only the ending of the China-Japanese strife, but the shortening of that other terrible conflict which threatens to engulf the whole world and plunge it into utter chaos.

In saying this I have the feeling that many writers on military affairs—certainly this one—have devoted most of their energy to pointed out ways to wage wars with death-dealing arms, and have paid little attention to the constructive thought that battles can be won by diplomacy as well as with guns. This column today is an effort to present facts which will be constructive.

As I see it, any agreement that the United States could make with Japan would have the support of Britain. The terms which must be the inevitable outcome of any American-Japanese settlement would immediately remove Nippon from the German sphere of influence—insofar as concerned Japanese participation in the war on the side of the Axis.

Nazis Use Disguises In Assault

British Communique Is to Effect Many of 1,500 Invaders Taken Upon Landing Planes Attack

Hitler's Air Arm Plays Big Role in Smash Upon Crete

(By The Associated Press)

German glider-borne, parachutist and plane-landed shock troops today invaded the Grecian Isle of Crete, government seat of King George II.

It was the first reported time in history of war that gliders had been used as troop transports under combat conditions.

A fierce battle was reported still raging, and some German troop-carrying planes were said to have found landing fields on the mountainous island.

In London, Prime Minister Winston Churchill told the House of Commons that the Germans had attacked Crete "in great strength" and that "a serious battle has begun and is developing."

Churchill said British, New Zealand and Greek troops were defending the island. He reported that 1,500 Germans disguised in New Zealand battle dress had landed in the initial assault.

A British communique said "a number" of the Nazi aerial invaders, who apparently struck in force, had already been "accounted for."

London military quarters said the assault appeared to be the forerunner of an attempt to gain control of the seaport to Syria—Germany's latest theatre of action in her march to the east—and to complete the western encirclement of Turkey.

The Germans and Italians have already bottled up the Aegean entrance to the Turkish-controlled Dardanelles by seizing Greece's Cyclades Islands strung out like a bridge of stepping-stones from the Greek mainland toward Crete.

British Middle East headquarters in Cairo said Nazi "chutists and air-borne troops attempted to secure a foothold on the island this morning and that 'a number have already been accounted for.'"

It was apparent that the fight was still raging.

Previously, it had been said that when the Germans attempted to take Crete by air, it might be in the nature of a full-dress rehearsal for a Nazi invasion of the British Isles.

London dispatches said Adolf Hitler's Luftwaffe was delivering a large-scale assault on the island, which lies 75 miles from the German-occupied Greek mainland.

The attack apparently began during the night or early this morning, according to sparse details reaching London.

Site of British Base

The fourth largest Mediterranean island, Crete is also the site of a main British naval base.

On the Iraq war front, British troops striking from Habbaniyah air base were reported to have advanced 15 miles toward ancient Baghdad, the capital, in a march into the heart of the middle east oil kingdom.

The British said imperial forces had crossed the Euphrates river and captured the village of Fallujah, 40 miles from Baghdad, with the aid of strong aerial support.

It was not disclosed whether the British were pushing on toward Baghdad, itself, but it was declared, perhaps significantly, that only one physical obstruction lay ahead—the Tigris river.

Iraq's high command, making no mention of the British-claimed capture of Fallujah, said a series of British attacks on the western Iraq front had been repulsed with "considerable losses."

A Baghdad communique said that 30 British armored cars were destroyed by Axis-aided Iraq's air force, and that losses were inflicted on the British in the Basra sector, at the head of the Persian Gulf. Two British gunboats which shelled Iraq defenses were said to have been driven off.

Amid the fast-spreading flames of war in the middle east, French Air Minister Gen. Jean Marie Bergeter was reported to have arrived at Beirut to direct the defense of French-ruled Syria against British aerial bombardment.

In Vichy, the French government, Chief of State Philippe Petain, now actively cooperating with Germany, bluntly threatened

Attended Western New York Apple Blossom Festival

Ulster county was represented at the Western New York Apple Blossom Festival, held at Canandaigua Saturday by Albert Kurdt, secretary of the Hudson Valley Festival committee and C. C. Dumond of Ulster Park, of the Farm Bureau Federation.

Mr. Kurdt reports that the Canandaigua people split fifty-fifty on "luck." Apple blossoms are in full bloom in that part of New York state, but, on the other hand, it rained all Saturday morning and there was a shower in the afternoon during the parade. The parade, which was a fine one, with some 15 or 20 bands and about 20 floats, went on as scheduled, despite the rain. It was necessary, however, to hold the coronation ceremonies in the Academy auditorium. There were eight contestants for queen honors, the winner being Betty Jane Lewis of Wayne county. The auditorium was packed, with every one of the 1,800 seats taken and people in the aisles, while a large crowd gathered outside.

The Ulster county visitors had places on the festival committee, Mr. Kurdt being one of the judges in selecting the queen and Mr. Dumond one of the judges of the floats. They also were guests at the reception Friday night, which was a part of the program of a dance sponsored by the students of the Academy.

On Sunday they witnessed the 33rd annual "Lilac Sunday" at Highland Park, Rochester. Mr. Kurdt says that estimates placed the number of people who witnessed the display of some 200 varieties of lilacs in full bloom at 100,000.

Men Lived Here 15,000 Years Ago

North America Peopled by Two Migration Waves Out of Asia.

WASHINGTON.—The New world apparently was peopled by major migration waves out of Asia. There have been human beings in North America for about 15,000 years. Those were conclusions presented by Smithsonian Institution scientists in a general review of North American prehistory.

Dr. Swanton himself is an authority on the migrations and contracts of Indian tribes before and after the coming of Columbus, and with efforts to trace similarities among languages.

It now is fairly conclusive, reported Dr. T. D. Stewart, that two different basic stocks were represented in the aboriginal population. One was characterized by long, high heads and broad noses. This type skull predominates in those sites which were settled first. Later sites yield skulls of a broad headed people.

All of Mongolian Descent.

"Long before the coming of the whites, it is pointed out, the two types had more or less fused. Both belonged to the Mongolian race, as does the present day Indian," said a bulletin of the Smithsonian Institution.

"A few years ago it was generally believed that man was a relatively recent arrival in North America. Finds of human artifacts in geologic strata which can tentatively be dated and in association with the bones of extinct animals have forced a revision of this doctrine. Man has almost certainly been on the continent, it is explained by Dr. Frank H. H. Roberts Jr., since the closing days of the last ice age.

"The remains are so few and scattered that the historical picture remains very confused. A broad outline is that late in the pleistocene geologic period there was an ice-free corridor from the arctic through Canada east of the Rockies by which bands of hunters were able to penetrate far to the southward.

Corridor Eventually Closed.

"Later, it now appears, this corridor was closed by some fluctuation in the ice sheet and—perhaps after a long interval—other groups began coming southward west of the Rockies.

"It is now apparent, reports David I. Bushness Jr., that the Indians encountered by the English colonists in the Virginia area, were far from constituting the 'first families of Virginia.' They had been preceded, perhaps for several thousand years, by various peoples whose scattered artifacts are being dug up over much of the state.

"Among the most perplexing problems of all is that afforded by the multiplicity of Indian languages. All differ in vocabulary and several differ even more profoundly in language structure. This difficult field is dealt with by Dr. John P. Harrington of the bureau of ethnology staff who maintains the hypothesis that all are derived from an original common mother language. This differentiation, however, may not have taken place in North America."

Roof's on Wrong House And Legal Action Ensues

OMAHA.—Is a man entitled to damages when somebody put a new roof on his cottage when he doesn't want a new roof?

That's the question for the courts here when George E. Turner sued William Petersen, roofer, for $100, charging that Petersen's firm, without Turner's knowledge or consent, put a new roof on his summer cottage.

Petersen said: "It was all an innocent and unintentional mistake. The new roof was supposed to have gone on a neighboring cottage."

Petersen, in a counter claim, said he offered to take the roof off but Turner refused to allow this—now Petersen asks that Turner be ordered to pay $22 for the roof.

Air-Warning System Is Praised by Military Men

NEW YORK.—Three high-ranking army, navy and air corps officers praised test operations of an air defense command's aircraft warning system and described it as the nucleus for a permanent organization of air defense "which we must have."

They were Lieut. Gen. Hugh A. Drum, commanding the First Army; Rear Admiral Clark H. Woodward, commander of the Third Naval district, and Maj. Gen. H. H. Arnold, chief of the air corps, all of whom inspected the system's New York information center on the final day of the four-day experimental tests.

Laborers' Union Case May Go on Trial This Term

The action brought for an accounting and to seek an election of officers by members of Local 17, Laborers' Union, which is No. 215 on the May trial calendar of Supreme Court, may be tried at this term under a ruling of Justice William Murray today.

Charles de la Vergne and Francis Martocci, attorneys for Frederick Dusing and others, plaintiffs, moved the case to the day calendar yesterday but Justice Murray withheld decision on the matter until today pending opportunity of Henry Hirschberg, Orange county district attorney, who appears for the defendants, Samuel Nuzzo and others, to appear in court and offer any objection to moving the case for trial. Mr. Hirschberg was unable to be in court Monday.

Today Justice Murray allowed the case to be placed on the trial calendar and announced that it would be taken up in its regular order if reached at this term.

Club Federation Names W. H. Riel New Head of Group

William H. Riel was elected president of the Federation of Men's Clubs last evening at the annual meeting held at Comforter Hall, E. P. Flowers was re-elected secretary and Al Reese was re-elected treasurer. The offices of vice president and chaplain were held open until the meeting in September.

The meeting was poorly attended with but 14 delegates present.

The proposition of extending the softball season and playing two halves was advanced and met with approval from the club delegates present. The Trinity Methodist softball team which has played but one game and forfeited the balance of the scheduled games, was relieved of its pledge and the resignation of the club accepted. It was reported that with this club out of the league for the balance of the season and through the securing of at least one additional diamond for two nights a week it would be possible to play a first and second half schedule. Secretary Flowers will prepare a revised schedule which will allow each team to meet its opponent twice during the season. The new schedule will call for two games a week and the season will extend into August.

Illinois Research Upsets Pet Ideas Of Human Liver

Urbana, Ill., May 20 (AP) — The pet theory about the best food to keep the liver healthy is upset completely by experiments reported today at the University of Illinois School of Medicine.

Sugars and starches were thought to be the only foods which exerted a beneficial effect on livers. They resulted in glycogen, a form of blood sugar, which is stored in the liver.

The upsetting experiments are reported by Doctors M. A. Spellberg and Robert W. Keeton. Proteins, the food principle of meat, milk and eggs, proved to be the diet most necessary to maintain a healthy liver.

Sugars and starches were secondary, and the third great class of food materials, fats, were positively detrimental to livers.

The Illinois experimenters were able to cause cirrhosis of the liver in animals by diets which were not deficient in either vitamins or proteins, but apparently contained certain toxic types of fat.

"From these investigations," it was declared, "it seems reasonable to conclude that the prevention and treatment of liver diseases in human beings may be accomplished by certain diets, especially those rich in proteins and vitamins, but low in toxic types of fat."

"This research furnishes further evidence that so-called 'alcoholic' cirrhosis of the liver may not be due to alcohol at all but rather to the neglect of diet that is so common among heavy drinkers."

Would Dissolve Union

Stockholm, Sweden, May 20 (AP) — Delayed advices from Reykjavik reported today that the parliament of Iceland resolved Friday to dissolve the union with Denmark which has existed since 1918. A temporary chief of state has been appointed to take the place of King Christian, who stayed in Denmark when the nation was occupied by German forces April 9, 1940. Iceland, a part of Denmark since 1380, became a sovereign state in 1918—united with Denmark only in that the Danish king also was king of Iceland. Wilhelm Finsen, Iceland's charge d'affaires here, said the island's people still were loyal to the ruling house but that they were compelled to leave the union because of communication difficulties.

It HAPPENED here!

BY NORMAN CHANDLER, CHAIRMAN, NEWSPAPER PUBLISHERS COMMITTEE

FRANCE SAT BEHIND THE MAGINOT. Her fatuous politicians and her servile press lulled the public into a fool's sense of security.

Uncle Sam sat complacently between his two oceans. But here, suddenly, AN AROUSED PUBLIC OPINION drives Uncle Sam to the GREAT-EST REARMAMENT EFFORT THE WORLD HAS EVER WITNESSED.

What AROUSED this public opinion? It wasn't the admirals and the generals. It wasn't the politicians, busy with their personal axe-grinding. It wasn't Business, occupied with problems of customers, products, profits.

Some unpopular fellow—all alone at first—raised his voice: "We need a bigger and better army." The newspapers reported his speech. A much MORE popular fellow answered him: "It will cost money—and we are safe enough as we are." The newspapers reported HIS speech. Soon another voice—and another—and another—took up the discussion. The newspapers printed BOTH sides of the news.

A curious columnist asked how long it took to build a bomber or a battleship. An air-line president made a statement—a labor leader and a congressman and an industrialist took issue with a banker—You saw and read all these, along with a thousand other things which shifted America from listless, low speed into high gear.

While there was yet time—and because we were all yet free to speak our minds, express our opinions and print the facts—

Now imagine, if you will, a nation like ours which lacked JUST ONE THING—a free press. Suppose we let "the government" say what could or could not be told. And suppose that government, for any reason whatever, preferred to keep you, the citizen, in the dark. France's government preferred that course.

How would we ever have aroused businessmen and workers and bankers and housewives—the whole nation in fact—to the effort and sacrifice we are now putting forth?

As it is, we are in this thing with our eyes open. We've had a free and full discussion of fact and opinion. We know what we're doing, why we are doing it. The decisions we are making are the decisions of the people—an enlightened, capable and informed people.

Your newspapers deserve no especial credit for their part. They have merely done the job newspapers in a democracy are supposed to do.

But remember, their job is NEVER FINISHED. Tomorrow's news is just as vital as today's. Censorship, suppression and restraint, placed upon your newspapers, are only ways of closing your eyes and ears to what is going on. Keep your papers FREE, independent, responsible to you, the reader, alone!

Over 300 leading newspaper publishers join together to bring you this weekly message about the function of the press in a free nation. Newspaper Publishers Committee, 420 Lexington Ave., New York.

 HOW ABOUT WASTE?
 In one of his recent columns, David Lawrence pointed out a great and often overlooked danger in the government's present spending program.
 "Drastic taxation—the most severe America has ever experienced—is planned," he wrote. "And yet not a word is heard about cutting out wasteful expenditures."
 "If the American people submit to a tax program such as is being rightly proposed to finance defense and still permit spending—usual on projects that can be omitted or else postponed, it will mean that the day of reckoning will bring an economic depression in the United States far more perilous than that of 1929-33."
 "Scarcely a week passes that there isn't some impetus given to projects which are being planned on a big scale which have relatively little to do with defense, but which are being dragged into the picture with defense as an excuse. . . . Only an alert and aroused public opinion can do something about it—and maybe the nation will have to organize its own economy campaign and make it an issue in the congressional elections of 1942."

Mr. Lawrence doesn't just criticize—he points to definite places where major cuts in government spending are both possible and desirable. There is, for instance, the proposal that $450,000,000 be spent on farm subsidy payments—a boost of $238,000,000 over last year. There is the fact that some $1,000,000,000 a year is still being spent for relief, even though employment is at the highest level in our history and in many sections there is a serious labor shortage. There is the fact that strong forces are behind measures to spend hundreds of millions of dollars on the St. Lawrence and other socialized power projects. The Chamber of Commerce of the United States has just passed resolutions asking that at least $2,000,000,000 be saved annually by curtailing non-defense spending, and devoting this money to defense needs, holding down debt or tax requirements by that amount.

Mr. Lawrence goes to the heart of the matter when he says that only the American people can do anything about this situation. They are willing to spend any amount necessary for defense. Are they willing to make unprecedented tax and debt sacrifices merely to pay for political luxuries, for experiments in state socialism, for a bigger and bigger bureaucracy, or for any activity which is not absolutely unavoidable? Governmental waste at this time is a certain guarantee of an unprecedented economic and social collapse at some future time.

FIRE AND THE FIFTH COLUMN
 The Federal Bureau of Investigation has published a series of twelve posters to encourage workers in defense industries to watch out for fifth columnists or saboteurs. One of these posters represents a crouching black figure holding a torch, with the heading, "The saboteur's favorite weapon is arson. . . . A thin wisp of smoke in the quiet hours . . . a belated alarm, and the damage is done. The saboteur chalks up another victory as important as any won in the front-line trenches. . . . Be Vigilant. . . . Be Alert. . . . Be Careful. . . . Know your fire prevention appliances. Never forget that America's front line is the production line."

We all recognize the truth expressed by this poster. We all know that nothing would delight fifth columnists more than fire in our defense industries, wasting man power, wasting time, wasting money for materials. Any fire anywhere serves the fifth columnists' purpose. All incendiary criminals should be considered as members of the enemies' forces.

America has always had incendiary criminals. When the National Board of Fire Underwriters was first founded, in 1866, it organized a Committee on Incendiarism and Arson, the purpose of which was to cooperate with all local authorities in the apprehension and punishment of such criminals. Its first efforts were confined to offering rewards for their capture. However, in 1917, it was decided that more aggressive measures should be taken. The system of offering rewards was discontinued and the work of the committee was broadened to include a staff of trained men who operate in all parts of the United States. These investigators cooperate closely with state fire marshals, local sheriffs, police officials and district attorneys, in developing evidence of arson. Frequently arson racketeers are brought to justice after having been traced for years across a dozen states.

The spotlight is now turned on incendiarism. It menaces our national safety. Unlimited public support should be given to groups which are fighting it, and thus safeguarding this nation's security.

This war gets so complicated that, in addition to the military men, we need psychologists and psychiatrists to explain it.

Oh for a lodge in some vast wilderness! But then, come to think of it, how could we find out what was going on?

GIVING HEARING AIDS THE PROPER TRIAL

Now that those who are hard of hearing are willing to wear hearing aids, the number and variety of these aids is increasing rapidly. It may not be long before hearing specialists and hearing aid manufacturers will be able to get results for the hard of hearing just as satisfactory as that obtained by the eye specialist and lens grinder—optician—for defective eyesight.

In order that those who are hard of hearing may obtain the hearing aid best suited to their type of hard of hearing, the American Medical Association, through its Council of Physical Therapy, has appointed a group of ear specialists to investigate, as fully as possible, hearing aids that are offered to the hard of hearing public. This group fully appreciates the different types of hard of hearing and the various causes, do not at present approve or disapprove of any one or more of these aids. They investigate the aids submitted by manufacturers from the standpoint of size, weight, and shape of various parts, the voltages and current drains of the batteries, and consideration of the mechanical features and construction of the instrument.

When there are marked defects such as excessive internal noise and "feed back" causing the instrument to "squeal" under normal conditions of use, it is duly noted. Measurements are made to determine the frequency range—number of vibrations at certain sound loads—over which the instrument shows a noticeable increase or enlargement of sound, just as a certain degree of curvature of the lens will enlarge an object where eyeglasses is defective.

Conversation is carried on with the patient at ordinary conversation pitch or level at a distance of 5 feet in a quiet room which is considered as being normal conditions.

All this group of specialists is doing at present is to advise purchasers of these aids whether or not any particular instrument is constructed properly and will give the degree of increase in pitch and enlargement of sound specified in their advertising. Knowing the cause of the patient's hard of hearing, the ear specialist can advise the type of instrument that "should" give the necessary aid. However, just as the patient with the defective vision goes back to the eye specialist for a "trial" of his glasses, so the hard of hearing patient should return to the ear specialist for a trial of the hearing aid that was prescribed.

Fires in Dwellings
 Approximately 60 per cent of the fires annually in the United States occur in dwellings, including homes, apartments and hotels, it was revealed today in a compilation of fires according to occupancy distribution made public by the National Board of Fire Underwriters, whose 75th anniversary dedicated to future progress in fire prevention will be observed during the National Defense Through Fire Defense Week of May 21-28.

The compilation, estimating the number of fires by occupancy groups with property losses in a typical year, listed a total of 660,000 fires, of which 390,000 occurred in various types of dwellings. This occupancy group, however, accounted for only $82,000,000, or less than one-third of the total property loss—$265,000,000—incurred in the table.

Other statistics showed a distribution of 70,000 fires with property loss at $33,000,000, among office buildings, warehouses, restaurants and other mercantiles; 25,000 fires with losses of $51,000,000, to manufacturing mills, packing plants, bakeries, cleaners, etc.; 10,000 with losses of $16,000,000, to public buildings, including hospitals, schools, churches, theatres, etc.; and 163,000, with losses of $63,000,000, to miscellaneous, including barns, lumber yards, railroad and wharf properties, power plants, oil tanks, automobiles, etc.

In commemoration of its anniversary, the National Board of Fire Underwriters, composed of 200 leading capital stock fire insurance companies, has been conducting a national fire prevention educational campaign for the past three months.

urns should be taken. The system of offering rewards was discontinued and the work of the committee was broadened to include a staff of trained men who operate in all parts of the United States. These investigators cooperate closely with state fire marshals, local sheriffs, police officials and district attorneys, in developing evidence of arson. Frequently arson racketeers are brought to justice after having been traced for years across a dozen states.

The spotlight is now turned on incendiarism. It menaces our national safety. Unlimited public support should be given to groups which are fighting it, and thus safeguarding this nation's security.

This war gets so complicated that, in addition to the military men, we need psychologists and psychiatrists to explain it.

Oh for a lodge in some vast wilderness! But then, come to think of it, how could we find out what was going on?

GIVING HEARING AIDS THE PROPER TRIAL

Now that those who are hard of hearing are willing to wear hearing aids, the number and variety of these aids is increasing rapidly. It may not be long before hearing specialists and hearing aid manufacturers will be able to get results for the hard of hearing just as satisfactory as that obtained by the eye specialist and lens grinder—optician—for defective eyesight.

In order that those who are hard of hearing may obtain the hearing aid best suited to their type of hard of hearing, the American Medical Association, through its Council of Physical Therapy, has appointed a group of ear specialists to investigate, as fully as possible, hearing aids that are offered to the hard of hearing public. This group fully appreciates the different types of hard of hearing and the various causes, do not at present approve or disapprove of any one or more of these aids. They investigate the aids submitted by manufacturers from the standpoint of size, weight, and shape of various parts, the voltages and current drains of the batteries, and consideration of the mechanical features and construction of the instrument.

When there are marked defects such as excessive internal noise and "feed back" causing the instrument to "squeal" under normal conditions of use, it is duly noted. Measurements are made to determine the frequency range—number of vibrations at certain sound loads—over which the instrument shows a noticeable increase or enlargement of sound, just as a certain degree of curvature of the lens will enlarge an object where eyeglasses is defective.

Conversation is carried on with the patient at ordinary conversation pitch or level at a distance of 5 feet in a quiet room which is considered as being normal conditions.

All this group of specialists is doing at present is to advise purchasers of these aids whether or not any particular instrument is constructed properly and will give the degree of increase in pitch and enlargement of sound specified in their advertising. Knowing the cause of the patient's hard of hearing, the ear specialist can advise the type of instrument that "should" give the necessary aid. However, just as the patient with the defective vision goes back to the eye specialist for a "trial" of his glasses, so the hard of hearing patient should return to the ear specialist for a trial of the hearing aid that was prescribed.

Washington Daybook

 Washington — Christening a battleship (or any other ship for that matter) generally gets a lot of attention.

Miss or Mrs. So-and-so socks the pros with a bottle of champagne and while Miss or Mrs. So-and-so is trying to rush the bubble-water off her orchid corsage, the ship slides down the ways. The cameras grind and the flash bulbs flash and the headwriters write "U.S.S. Plunkett Is Launched At Brooklyn."

That isn't the whole story of getting a ship under steam at all. A really good story—which never is written or photographed—comes when they "step the mainmast."

Let's take a recent big ship and run through this ceremony and I think you'll get what I mean. "Stepping the mainmast"—as a ceremony—is probably a lot older than christening. It goes back beyond Roman times and has its roots in superstition.

A few days ago when the U.S.S. North Carolina—newest of the modern battleships—was ready for the ceremony at Philadelphia, a group of workmen and naval officers assembled down in her lowest depths and tossed coins into the base of the metal shaft that is the ship's mainmast. They tossed coins until $7.71 in U. S. money, a St. Christopher's medal, an English penny, an English half-penny and a Chinese "cash" had clinked into the shallow, 17½-inch pie plate that is the mainmast base. A cover was screwed over this and then the mainmast was swung into position and screwed down.

It Must Be Done
 Throughout the solemn ceremony rain came down in gentle torrents, but no one paid any attention to it. The state of the weather means nothing when the "stepping of the mainmast" is in progress, but failure to step the mast would be as fatal, seafaring men will assure you, as leaving sprung-seams in the ship's plates.

Aside from the Chinese and British coins (I couldn't find a soul who could explain why these particular coins were selected), the "treasure" of the North Carolina consists of a half-dollar, 18 quarters, 11 dimes, 23 nickels and 46 pennies.

Although I knocked on a lot of doors at the navy department, all I got was vague answers as to where this strange rite originated and why it has been carried down through the ages.

Ancient Roman dug-out canoes and old Spanish wrecks have been found with coins hidden in their keels. Pomeranian seamen, a long time ago, were known to have buried silver coins and "a bit of stolen wood" under the heel of the mast. These are long-ago things.

But a few years back when the U.S.S. New Orleans was commissioned, it was recorded that the officers-to-be placed 10 pennies under the foremast—and two dimes, three nickels and 28 pennies under the heel of the mainmast—all coins laid "heads up."

'Keep Souls Safe'
 Seafaring men will tell you that coins under the mainmast not only bring good luck but "keep their souls safe." Commander Beckett, of the British Royal Navy, who has made a study of the custom, says it arises from the old Roman habit of placing coins in the mouths of the dead to pay Charon for transportation across the River Styx. Should a ship meet disaster, says the commander, there would be coins there to pay the ferryman of the Styx for a safe crossing for all aboard.

Whatever the explanation be, it there is one amazing thing: No shipbuilder today would think of building a ship without planning for the superstition—although wooden masts have given way to hollow steel masts and in order to make a receptacle for the coins, modern shipbuilders have to construct the "covered pie-plate" inside the hollow base of the mainmasts of our time.

Oh yes, I forgot to tell you. In the base of the North Carolina's mast, the coins included one complete set of 1941 imprints: That is, one half-dollar, quarter, dime, nickel and penny run out of the mint this year. And these were separately packaged. Don't ask me why. That's what I asked the Navy and all I got was a half-penny look of disgust.

When Will U. S. Enter War? Never, It Seems, If Hitler Can Prevent It
 (By DAVID LAWRENCE)

Washington, May 20 — Presumably the most oft-asked question in America today is when will the United States enter the European war? And more and more from a study of all the factors involved the answer can be given: "Never, if Adolf Hitler can possibly prevent it."

The background of America's action in relation to aid to Britain and to the use of convoys can best be understood by a study of Nazi propaganda as employed inside this country and from overseas by radio.

Listening now for a long time to Nazi broadcasts especially directed to people in the United States, observers here find that Herr Hitler not only fears American intervention but is doing everything possible to prevent it. This means that he will not allow some isolated event to become provocative of war and that the Nazi government will look even upon the use of convoys as it has looked upon the repeal of the Lend and Lease Bill as steps that are unfortunate, but are not as grave to the Nazi cause as would be an American declaration of war.

What Herr Hitler hopes is that he can keep America's effort at its present pace — interrupted frequently by strikes and paralyzed by the many restrictions which a peace-time democracy necessarily imposes on itself. If America were on a war basis, there is always the danger, from the Hitler viewpoint, that America might become efficient.

The greatest threat to Nazi victory is America's industrial might. But the relatively slow pace of American development is not at all a subject for fear at Berlin. At the present rate, the United States will not reach the peak of her production till some time in 1943 before which time the Nazis hope to have softened British resistance or made their starvation blockade of the British Isles effective.

The use of convoys if confined to American ships would still not be as dangerous to Berlin as the active participation of the United States navy in the war. Under the first set of circumstances only American flag vessels would be detected. Under conditions of actual war, American navy would be pooled with the British and all ships on the allied side would be defended. Also the American air force would be joined with the royal air force if the United States entered the war.

The Nazi short wave broadcasts are far more emotional in their appeal to American public opinion to keep the United States out of the war than are the speeches of the isolationists here. Thus on last Sunday night there was a Mothers' Day broadcast from Berlin directed to American mothers. Someone in Berlin slipped up and didn't know that Mothers' Day happened on the Sunday one week before, but anyway, the Maudlin program said not a word about the concern that might have been felt in September, 1939 for German mothers or for Polish mothers who are the victims of a war started as a consequence of Hitler's demand for territory from Poland.

The address by an English-speaking woman's voice under Nazi sponsorship might have been written by any American isolationist, but it was far more eloquent in its delivery than any heard on this side. The pressure of keeping America out of the war, as expressed by Berlin broadcasts, is becoming sensational. It serves to corroborate judgments frequently voiced here that President Roosevelt could use naval convoys and seize Axis merchant ships without the slightest possibility that the Nazi government will ever declare war.

If there is any declaring of war done, it will have to be by the United States. Although there are threats aplenty as to what might occur if convoys are used, these are merely vehicles of policy to deter President Roosevelt from employing convoys. When convoys are used it will be found that Berlin will not aggravate the situation by overt acts or by anything that might lead to war.

After convoys are in use and still the American shipments in British ships are sunk, the clamor for our actual participation in the war will arise, especially as it will be contended that American ships that are not adequate to carry the goods to Britain.

The risks the Nazis run in torpedoing any American ships are well known in Berlin. Safe passage for American vessels bound for the Red Sea is taken for granted here. Herr Hitler is relying on the division of opinion inside the United States to keep a declaration of war from ever being made. It is as essential to a Hitler victory that the United States stay out of the war as it is that Britain be effectively blocked.

This outline of the Nazi strategy happens to coincide with the sincere conviction of many isolationists which is leading to an unwillingness to tolerate misconstruction of the motives of many of the opponents of the administration's foreign policy. There was a considerable element opposed to American intervention in 1917, but after the die was cast the country became united. If circumstances should arise requiring actual participation in the war as a means of defense for the United States, it would not be surprising if national unity came quickly after a declaration of war.

It is significant that there is much more talk in Washington of an outright declaration of war than there used to be about measures of circumvention and "undeclared war." The President has declared war. That the American interests were being attacked. All the campaign pledges of the President promised to keep America out of foreign wars "except in case of attack." The Vichy government collaboration with the Nazis, involving German use of Dakar on the west coast of Africa and the transfer of Martinique to the Nazis as a base, can overnight bring into play a conception of war by the United States as a means of defense against potential attack by the Nazis on the western hemisphere. It will be recalled that the President told Congress a year ago that such modern conditions it was sometimes necessary to "attack an aggressor in his route." That might mean occupation of Dakar on the west African coast because of its nearness to Brazil.

"AT CENTURY'S TURN"
 By H. L. VAN DEUSEN

In May, 1917, there was no flag or flag pole on the grounds of old Kingston Academy, which are now known as Academy Park, and that month Miss Dorothy Freeman of 74 Fair street, decided something should be done about it. So she wrote a letter to the Freeman enclosing a dollar bill and suggested that, those interested send in their contributions for that purpose.

The plea was so successful that more than $200 was raised, and to the young lady was accorded the honor of unfurling the flag on Memorial Day.

I also recall that many complaints were made that May regarding the speeding of automobiles on Broadway at 25 or more miles an hour. Complaints were so insistent that the police department arranged its first speed trap on that thoroughfare in an effort to curb speeding.

The first day the trap was in operation several speeders were nabbed and taken before Recorder Andrew Lang who imposed fines of $5 each.

That year the speed limit in Kingston, as I recall it, was 15 miles an hour. When the speed trap was criticised by some resident the police called attention to the fact that no arrests were made of those traveling at less than 25 miles an hour, and only at that speed or higher were pinches made.

The play "Country Folks" was presented in the Grange Hall at Lake Katrine on May 11, 1917, by a group from the Sunday school of the First Presbyterian Church on Elmdorf street. The play proved highly successful. Among those in the cast were Ralph Griffin, Mrs. Samuel Brown, Miss Minnie Sleight, Mrs. H. C. Christian, William Swarthout, G. Richter, Richter, H. C. Christian, Mrs. G. Richter, Zelf, John Brown, George Silver, and Miss Jessie Sleight.

The Ulster County W. C. T. U. in May, 1917, had set as the goal an effort to make Ulster county, like the adjoining county of Delaware, a dry county. Frank E. Howard, known as ex-convict No. 11221, was engaged to stage a series of temperance rallies throughout the county.

That was the opening phase that year in the campaign to make the county dry. Kingston that year, for the first time in its history, was to be given the opportunity of voting "yes" or "no" on the question.

The first chamber of commerce was formed at Marseilles in the 15th century.

 Junior Miss
 By Sally Benson

Those to whom the week-end is unendurable without a copy of the New Yorker need not bother to pick up Sally Benson's "Junior Miss," for they probably have read all the stories. People who don't read the New Yorker, however, might do worse than this little book. Judy Graves, the "Junior Miss" out of Miss Benson's mind, suffers less from strict application of the New Yorker short story formula than most characters.

This is because Judy is just as vague as the formula, which declares that each story shall end with a fairly pointless little flirt of words reminiscent of the petticoat toss of the "natives." Pre-adolescent brats are vague without much direction, sometimes even pitiable. Judy is.

Judy is confined to a New York apartment most of the year. She has a father in Wall street, a mother who tries to do her best for her only child, and a girl friend named Fuffy. One should know, too, that Judy is in the awkward stage. Her legs are a little heavy, and her waistline is neither where nor what it should be.

In the stories we find Judy dropping the dimes she has been given for bus conductor, and getting red in the face. We find her buying a coat which doesn't fit because it has a squirrel collar, constructing a chapter of family history around the gold baseball his college gave Father back in 1916, embarrassing the family because she seems to play a drunk too well in the school play, writing her autobiography somewhat oddly, and a girl friend named Fuffy, one should know, too, that Judy is in the awkward stage. Her legs are a little heavy, and her waistline is neither where nor what it should be.

Four Fliers Die When Winds Cause Crash of Bombers

Rains, S. C., May 20 (AP)—Two light army bombers collided high among the clouds and spiraled dizzyly to the ground near a country schoolhouse yesterday, killing their four occupants.

Farmers and school children watched the two planes brush each other as a group of five bombers flew V-formation over this community at nearly a two-mile altitude.

The victims were Second Lieut. Frank B. Ralston, Pittsburgh, Second Lieut. Allen J. Moore, Reno, Nev., Sergeant David L. Boyd, Frost, Tex., and Corporal Herbert O. Pruitt, Collinsville, Miss.

Neil McCracken, a farmer, said "all of a sudden one of the planes in the back lunged forward and banged into the tail of the one ahead of it—just like somebody had stepped on the gas."

He said Moore bailed out and floated down in his parachute for some time. Then, McCracken asserted, "the parachute seemed to fold up and he fell."

Moore's plane struck an abandoned tenant house and the other fell in a field one mile distant. Both burned.

The planes were on a training flight from the Savannah, Ga., air base to Langley Field, Va.

Street Job Progresses

Work on the reconstruction of Smith avenue by the Board of Public Works is progressing, and Acting Superintendent Max Oppenheimer said this morning that it was expected that the street would be completed by the end of the month. At the present time Smith avenue has been reconstructed between Prince and Cornell streets, and the work will be carried through to Albany avenue. As soon as Smith avenue is reconstructed the public works board plans to take up the reconstruction of Pearl street.

Worker Is Jailed

Trenton, N. J., May 20 (AP)—Charged by federal agents with obstructing national defense work by shutting off the power several times in a unit of a big cable and wire manufacturing plant, Charles Virok, 42, of Trenton, was in the Mercer county jail today. Virok denied the accusation when arraigned yesterday before United States Commissioner Marvin A. Spaulding. He was held in $7,500 bail for the federal grand jury.

Shipments Are Rushed

Manila, May 20 (AP)—The Manila Tribune said today that shipments of copra, coconut oil and hemp were being rushed to Japan in anticipation of the United States extending export licensing to the Philippines.

F. D. R. Creates Civilian Post and Names La Guardia

Washington, May 20 (AP)—President Roosevelt established by executive order today an office of civilian defense to be headed by Mayor F. H. LaGuardia of New York.

The President separated the new civilian defense agency into two general divisions. One will be a board of civilian protection with LaGuardia as chairman and on it also will be representatives of the war, navy and justice departments, the federal security administration, the council of state governments, American Municipal Association, and the United States Council of Mayors.

It will advise and assist in formulating civilian defense measures and attempt to provide "adequate protection of life and property" in the event of emergency.

The second division will be made up of a "volunteer participation committee" which the President said would have not more than 20 members representative of various regions and interests of the nation. LaGuardia, Mr. Roosevelt said, will draw no pay in the defense post and will retain his position as mayor of New York city.

He will arrive in Washington tomorrow, however, to take charge of setting up the agency designed to give every American citizen an opportunity to help on the defense effort.

Gets Big Job

Washington, May 20 (AP)—New York's Mayor F. H. LaGuardia had a big new job waiting for him today—the organization of a nationwide program of civilian defense precautions.

La Guardia, it was learned, has been selected by President Roosevelt to head a new government agency—the Office of Civilian Defense—that will rank with the Office of Production Management as a major unit in preparing for "total defense."

As the Knudsen of the civilian field, the New York mayor will have the responsibility for organizing a national air raid precaution system, for coordinating federal and local defense efforts, for planning recreational and health facilities near training camps, and for other tasks.

President Roosevelt, it was understood, has completed his executive order setting up the new agency, but formal announcement has been deferred for personal reasons.

LaGuardia agreed to accept the job at a long luncheon conference with Mr. Roosevelt yesterday, authoritative sources said. The understanding was that he would be able to continue as mayor of New York. He also is chairman of the United States Conference of Mayors and co-chairman of the Canadian-American joint defense board.

It is considered likely that there will be American counterparts for British air raid wardens, auxiliary firefighting service, volunteer constables, emergency ambulance and transport drivers, fire watchers or "potters," and mobile kitchen units. Apparently the plan is to enlist men and women alike.

The Orient's first parachute tower, similar to those long popular at fairs in the United States, has just been erected in Tokyo, Japan.

Miss Talley Says Husband, Doctor Took Baby Away

Singer Says Eckstrom Was Interested in Contracts
She Had on Coast;
Seeks Divorce

Los Angeles, May 20 (AP)—Marion Talley, testifying in her suit for divorce and for custody of her six-year-old daughter, cried out in court "they took Susan away from me when she was two weeks old."

"They" were identified as Adolph G. Eckstrom, 43, Miss Talley's New York singing teacher, husband, and Dr. D. E. Johnson, who delivered her daughter in St. Paul, Minn., April 9, 1935.

Miss Talley, 34, denying Eckstrom's charges that she abandoned Susan, testified that he urged her to hurry to Hollywood to begin work under a movie contract.

"He said everything would be taken care of, that I should go ahead," she testified yesterday. "I told him, 'now that the baby is born, I don't want to go to California. I want to stay and take care of Susan.' He said I should go because my singing years were not of great duration."

"He argued that he had arranged for the child to be placed in a children's hospital where she could get better care than I could give her."

Miss Talley burst into tears at this point and was excused. Earlier, Miss Talley had stated she was indiscreet with Eckstrom; that they were married March 23, 1935, just three weeks before Susan was born.

Ignores Husband

The Kansas City girl whose voice earned her a million dollars with the New York Metropolitan Opera and in the films completely ignored her husband, who walked from the courtroom as she began her testimony. It was the first time they had seen each other since Miss Talley won Susan's custody nine months of the year in a New York court last year. Under the New York order, Eckstrom is to take Susan June 15.

Eckstrom had sought a delay of the divorce trial until after his suit to recover Susan is heard in New York, but failed. In the New York case, he charged Miss Talley was not a fit mother; that she had been indiscreet with seven prominent men.

He is contesting the singer's suit for divorce and for custody of Susan, but did not file for a divorce for himself.

Before Miss Talley testified, her attorney, Isaac Pach, charged in his opening statement: "He (Eckstrom) refused to tell Miss Talley the whereabouts of her child. Later, he telephoned one of her attorneys and demanded $150,000 as a condition of telling her where the child was. That is a species of extortion and blackmail."

He also mentioned a divorce suit in which Mrs. Aubrey Scott charged her movie director husband with indiscretions with Miss Talley. "We will prove that it is a fake divorce suit," Pach said. Eckstrom's attorney, Philbrick McCoy, asserted Miss Talley had been "more interested in this happy-go-lucky merry Andrew (Scott) than in her child and she forgot the obligations of motherhood. She cared not one whit for her child. Her one god was money."

"She hired this chap to go to New York and snoop, to worm his way into the household of her husband, whom the snoopers sought to get 'drunk and talking.'"

"Miss Talley and the snoopers Scott, on February 2, 1939, attempted to take the child Susan by force from the home of Mr. Eckstrom's sister in Mamaroneck, N. Y. The snoopers bungled the job, however."

"On that same day Miss Talley was taken to the Barbizon Plaza (in New York city) where Scott registered for himself and for her in room 1154. The hotel bills show that they were there together for many days."

Indian Chief Loses

His Latest Battle

Tucson, Ariz., May 20 (AP)—It required a gun-toting posse, directed from the air by a flying United States marshal, to vanquish defiant, 90-year-old Pia Machita, Papago Indian chief, whose life-long resistance to the United States government was climaxed when he ordered his young braves to ignore selective service registration.

Pia Machita and 10 of his followers were in a federal jail today, charged with assault upon a deputy marshal who was mauling when he went into the southern Arizona Papago reservation to arrest the recalcitrant Indians last October 16.

A 17-man posse, making its third trip after Pia Machita, approached his village by automobile and horseback at dawn yesterday, guided by Marshal Ben J. McKinney from an airplane.

McKinney's plane landed on a reservation road. The officers surprised the old chief, who surrendered when convinced that he and his men were outnumbered.

To apprehend rebellious Indians in other nearby villages, McKinney returned to the plane and led the posse across the desert, dropping notes of instruction and circling low over tribesmen fleeing through the mesquite bushes.

The officers granted Pia Machita time to milk his cow and eat his breakfast before removing him to the Sells Indian agency.

Pact With Japan Would Hasten End Of Two Conflicts

from the Nazis, at least far enough to insure that the Soviet wouldn't give active support to Hitler.

It needs only half an eye to see that this enforcement of Japanese and Russian neutrality would be a terrific blow to the Axis powers. Apart from other aspects it would release strong British naval, military and air forces in the Far East for use in Europe and Africa.

By the same token, if the Axis operations should force the United States into the war, we also should be able to employ units from our Pacific fleet in the European theatre. It would be a God-send to be able to get ahead with the big show and not have to worry about the Orient.

And the alternative of an agreement with the Japanese? Well, it would mean the difference between a short war in Europe, and a conflict of attrition which would leave the world flat on its back, no matter who "won."

And what is the basis for believing that Japan is ready to do business? For one thing she is making no bones of her desire to liquidate the China affair, as she calls it. She is in a bad way economically, and finally recognizes that it would take many years more to conquer China, if it could be done at all. A large proportion of her essential supplies come from America, and her sale of products here is vast.

Well informed sources close to this situation tell me they believe Japan would agree to withdraw from China militarily in exchange for full economic cooperation by the Chinese. This being so, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek could make peace on such terms, provided the United States recommended it.

They tell me, too, that Japan would be prepared to reaffirm the open door policy for America and other western powers. The Japanese also would agree to forego anything more than economic penetration in further development of their program of a new order in the Far East.

If this does indeed represent Japan's present feeling, as I believe, then it must be of mutual advantage for the two countries to try for a solution of their differences.

Defense Gardens to Check World Onion Shortage

Large Onions Grown From Onion Sets, Harvested in August

A world-wide shortage of onions is in prospect. Onions have been so scarce in Great Britain during the past winter, they were auctioned off as prizes in relief bazaars; and in this country onion seed is selling this spring at two times last spring's price, because of seed crop failure. The seed crop now being grown has met with grave difficulties so the outlook that onions will be in short supply for two years at best.

Defense gardens may grow onions not only for eating in the sprout stage as green onions, but to provide mature bulbs for winter storage. While onion seed prices have gone up, onion sets, which are most easily handled in the small garden, have not.

Small onion sets should be used in the garden when the objective is large dry onions. For the production of green onions for bunching or table use larger sets are better than the very small ones. Onion sets from 3/4 inch to 1 inch in diameter or slightly larger, grow faster, because there has been stored up in the bulb plant food which is quickly made available for the growing plant, and green onions grown from larger sets are likely to be more crisp and tender than when the same size of green onion is produced from smaller sets.

For green onions it is advisable to plant onion sets about 2 inches below the surface. So that there will be a succession, many home gardeners plant onion sets at intervals of a week to ten days. White onion sets are the most popular for the production of green onions, but yellows are frequently used, and if one does not object to the color, red onion sets may also be used for this purpose. Remember that onions like a rich soil. A balanced plant food should be applied at the rate of one quart to fifty square feet, raked into the top soil before the sets are planted.

From 15 to 30 pounds of large onions can be produced from 1 quart of onion sets which do not run more than 3/4 inch in diameter. At prevailing retail values of both onions and onion sets, from a dollar's worth of onion sets from $25 to $50 worth of onions can be produced.

Zinnias of Many Types All Like Hot Sunshine

Zinnias are the most widely grown flowers in this country, having taken front rank away from sweet peas, asters and petunias, by virtue of two things—their will to live and thrive under almost any conditions, and the great improvement made in them by plant breeders.

Zinnias have a remarkable variety of both types and colors, and each year sees still more new ones introduced. The latest are giant flowered strains of Fantasy and scabiosa flowered types. In size, they vary from half an inch to six inches in diameter. Among the smaller ones are flowers which few except experienced gardeners would recognize as zinnias.

Their color range includes yellow, orange, pink, and red in almost all tones and blends. Blue is lacking, but there are lavenders which go far to the blue side of the spectrum. The giant flowered types are most popular, perhaps for the reason that many gardeners are inclined to admire size, as something you can really put a value on, in inches. But in the border the giant are the least effective, because they are inclined to hide their flowers in foliage.

The medium and small flowered types will make bushy plants and hold their multitude of blossoms up where they make a show. For a good border effect all types may be grown together, and they will blend in coloring and habit of growth most pleasingly.

Zinnias are warm weather plants and the seed must be sown in warm soil. Best results are obtained by sowing the seeds in the ground where the plants are to flower, covering 1 to 1 1/2 inches. Firm the soil, level the surface, and do not sprinkle. By this method they will sprout readily and after the plants have appeared through the surface, they may be watered. When the plants are 2 or 3 inches high they may be thinned and transplanted by reaching sufficient soil with each plant so that the roots are not disturbed. Eventually they should be not less than 1 foot apart in the row.

It is not necessary to remove the first flower or to pinch the plants back to improve the stem lengths or to obtain large flowers.

OFFICE CAT By Junius

A compromise is never entirely satisfactory to anyone but is much better than no agreement at all.

The train was crowded, but a very fat man, who sat by the window, ignored the ominous looks of passengers for taking up so much room.

A boy selling peanuts and candy poked his head in at the door and tried to sell his wares.

"Peanuts, sir?" he inquired of the fat man.

The man was slightly deaf, and, not noticing the peanuts, though the boy wanted a seat in the already packed car, so he replied: "Full up; no more room inside."

Laughter from the other occupants of the car followed, and the fat man wondered why.

"That Second Sale"

"To sell a man once is a simple affair.

Not a matter for very much crowing.

And will not, in the course of a full business year.

On your books make a very great showing.

But to sell him again is a far different thing—

When he comes back for more, it's a token

That your service is good, and you've made him your friend;

Sell him twice, he is yours—years unbroken!"

The young husband came home one evening very much dejected.

Wife—What is the trouble, Honey?

Hubby—I've got to give up smoking. Sweetheart. The doctor told me today that one lung was about gone now.

Wife (hopefully)—Well, cheer up Honey, maybe it will last out until we get enough coupons to get the rug.

A lady seated next to a deaf old gentleman was doing her best to help along a conversation. As the fruit was passed, she asked him:

Lady—Do you like bananas?

Deaf Man—I beg your pardon.

Lady (loudly)—Do you like bananas?

Deaf Man—I beg your pardon.

Lady—Do you like bananas? she finally shrieked, loud enough for everyone in the room to hear.

Deaf Man—Well, well—really—the old fashioned night shirt is good enough for me.

Why is it that a girl always pretends to be just a little bit afraid of the dark when she is alone with a man?

Visitor—So you call your canary 'Joe'. Does that stand for Joseph or Josephine?

Johnny—We don't know. That's why we call it 'Joe'.

"I'm glad I am not a rich man."

"Half the people envy the rich and the other half hate 'em."

Sam—Yes, sir, I cut Jack Dempsey almost to ribbons once.

Joe—Boy, I didn't know you were a prize fighter.

Sam—I'm not, I'm a barber.

The man who does not know what to do with his week-end should put his hat on it.

The wife was making a touch for more money.

Husband (beefing) — Always more money. This life is like a game of chess, nothing but check, check, check.

Wife—And if you don't give me more money, it will be even more like a game of chess. It will be pawn, pawn, pawn!

One trouble is that when the dollar gets so that it will really buy something we have a hard time locating the dollar.

The Moss Feature Syndicate, Greensboro, N. C.

WOODSTOCK

Woodstock, May 19.—Among the arrivals in Woodstock over the week-end were Grace Osborne, Dr. Martin Schutze, Miss Micklesen and the Steinhilber family.

The small shop belonging to Asa Wolven has been repainted and decorated inside and is now being run by Peter F. Folie of Woodstock.

John Harrison has been taken from the Homestead here, to the Orthmann Sanitarium in Kingston.

Mr. and Mrs. David King of Amsterdam spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. O. W. Mosher.

The St. Dunstan picnic on Sunday was held near Mead's and services were conducted at the "Church on the Mount". About 25 people attended.

Mr. and Mrs. Fuller and Mr. and Mrs. Fister of Kingston were in Woodstock Sunday.

Corporal Norman Dock spent the week-end with his people here.

Lester Haws spoke over WKNY on Monday morning on the subject "Brighten Your Corner." Mr. and Mrs. Haws visited New Jersey last week.

The first quarterly conference of the Methodist Church will be held in Wittenberg Tuesday evening. Dr. Carroll, district superintendent, will preside.

The Rev. Lester Haws of the Methodist Church visited Malden Monday afternoon where he officiated at the funeral of Howard Paries.

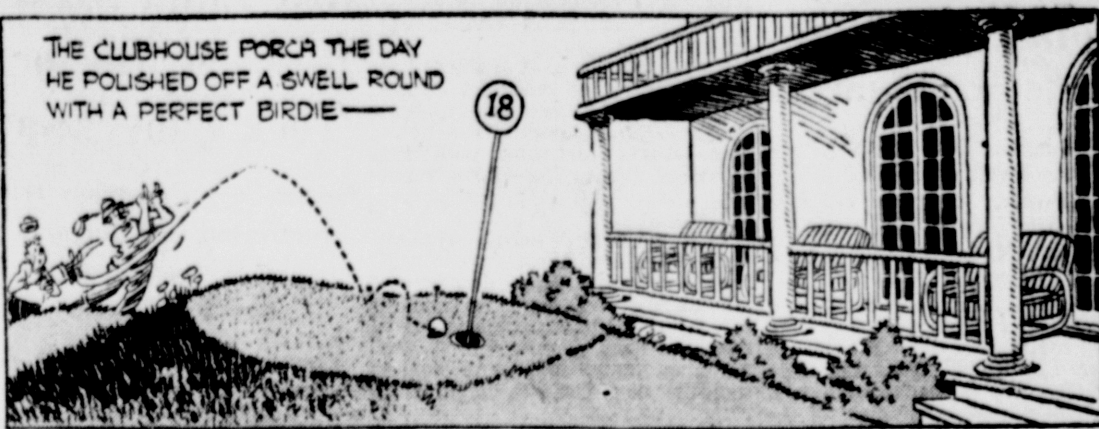

Zinnias naturally tend to branch near the ground. To prolong the blooming season, cut the flowers with long stems back to within 1 or 2 joints of the main stalk.

A second and third planting of zinnias may be made during the early summer months and in warm weather they may be expected to begin blooming within six to eight weeks from the time the seed is sown.

Transactions on Exchange Monday Drop to New Low

The New York Stock Exchange started the week with speculative interest edging still closer to the vanishing point, the ticker coming to a standstill at frequent intervals as total transactions for the day dropped to 233,010 shares, smallest for a full five-hour session since August 26, 1940. Chances in the Dow-Jones averages were negligible, as prices held in a narrow range. The average of 30 industrial stocks had a net gain of .04 point for the day, closing at 116.15; rails were unchanged at 27.82 and utilities moved up .08, to 17.30.

The list of 15 most active stocks told the same story as the averages, changes running from 1/8 to 1/2 and plus and minus marks being about evenly divided. Anaconda copper led the list with turnover of but $800 shares, to close 1/4 higher for the day.

In the commodity markets speculation in grains featured the day and wheat prices went to new highs as Secretary of Agriculture Wickard stated that President Roosevelt "wants the basic crops to reach parity this year." This was taken to mean that the President would sign the Fulmer bill which would authorize government loans on five basic commodities at 85 per cent of parity (which means the prices prevailing in 1909-14).

At best levels wheat was three cents a bushel higher but following profit-taking it closed at Chicago 20 to 2 1/2 cents higher. Cotton started to follow wheat upward, but on heavy hedge selling turned lower after having gained as much as 85 cents a bale.

There were heavy offerings of raw sugar at prices ranging from 3.40 to 3.50 cents a pound, but refiners were not greatly interested. Refined held at the base price of 5.10 cents a pound. Rubber prices slid off 1/2 cents a pound. Backers were said to be holding hides at 1/2 cent a pound increase. Hog prices at Chicago moved 5 to 25 cents higher, the average cost being around $9.10 a hundred, with the best going at $9.25.

The crop loan legislation, if it becomes law, will, it is estimated, mean a bill of $450 million on cotton and wheat alone, which, some say, will have to pay. It adds 32 cents a bushel to wheat and 4 1/2 cents a pound to cotton.

Stated that final decision has been reached by the government to go into the aluminum manufacturing business. Arrangements are being made to put $300,000,000 of government money into a plant with a capacity of half a billion pounds a year. Plant will probably be placed in the northwest near a federal power source, with the Reynolds Metal Co. the probable operator, on a lease contract basis. Could be 18 months or two years before it could get into operation.

In addition to the claim that more aluminum will be needed for an expanded airplane program officials justify the move on the ground that the industry "needs competition."

New Jersey Assembly killed bills which would tax chain stores for employment relief and also tax profits of the American Society of Authors, Composers and Publishers. A bill to outlaw strikes by workers in defense industries was killed on the ground that action on this line should be taken by the federal government.

Proposals for a major revision of the corporate excess profits tax are submitted to Congress by a treasury department. Said to be the President's backing the changes would mean sharply higher taxes for industry, with the new industries particularly hard hit.

The plan would base all excess profits levies on invested capital, with exemptions comparatively small.

Found With Car

An automobile belonging to Rus-Rhodes, Clintondale garage, was missed a few days since later was picked up at Wee-ken. It was in possession of two boys who had been in the Clintondale section at the car disappeared. The boys been at a summer home being to their grandmother, near v's Corners. Trooper Lynn of the B. C. I. said that a boy also had been missed from her cottage nearby. Inasmuch as the boy found with the car under age he could not be brought back to this county, and time had been committed in Jersey, so that the only action in the case was to turn it over to his parents.

New York, May 20 (P)—Stocks rallied modestly in today's market under leadership of oils, steels, aircrafts and specialties.

Prices began to harden after a hesitant start and volume picked up on the come-back. While rails did little either way, gains of fractions were spread over most other departments near the final hour. Transfers were at the rate of approximately 400,000 shares.

The fact the market yesterday had been able to maintain a reasonably steady demeanor in the face of tax pessimism, war doubts and labor worries, brokers said, caused some customers to reinstate commitments.

Bonds and commodities were uneven.

Stocks in the resistant class included U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Standard Oil (N. J.), Standard Oil of Ky., Skelly Oil, Douglas Aircraft, J. I. Case, International Harvester, Western Union, du Pont, Union Carbide, National Distillers and Climax Molybdenum.

In the curb forward inclinations were exhibited by Calamba Sugar, Humble Oil, International Petroleum, Pantepec and N. J. Zinc.

A STATE IS RECREATED

The state of Croatia received its fifth foreign dynasty in 859 years, when King Vittorio Emanuele of Italy named his 41-year-old cousin, the Duke of Spoleto, as King Aimone. The new kingdom, closely allied to Italy, was carved out of Yugoslavia as a result of the Axis drive through the Balkans. Rome reports said Italy would get part of the Dalmatian coast (1). Earlier Berlin reports forecast Italy also would get a corner of northern Yugoslavia (2), that Germany would absorb Carniola in northwest Yugoslavia (3), and that Hungary would take territory along the Rumanian border (4). The exact boundaries of the new Croat state are to be decided by an Italian-Croatian commission. The diagonalized area is the approximate new Croat state.

At the same time, the Vichy government suspended the granting of visas for Martinique, France's only route of direct communication with the Americas, as a result of "the uncertainty of the situation of French possessions in America."

Dispatches from Damascus, Syria, said the British were hitting Syrian airports in almost daily attacks—presumably attempting to halt German warplanes which the British say are flying to aid Iraq's Premier Rashid Ali Al Gailani, who had appealed to Hitler for help.

Ankara reports said the ranks of Syria's next-door neighbor, Iraq, were being swelled rapidly for the fight against Britain by volunteers from Soviet Russia, Afghanistan and Iran (Persia).

There were hints that France's German conquerors had a hand in the Vichy stand—demanding that France reestablish control of all her colonies, or even grant the Reich colonial concessions, in return for a relaxing of the armistice terms.

British suggested France even might be persuaded to return to the Reich the Togoland and Cameroon colonies Germany lost in the World War.

cover for the death of her husband who died from injuries suffered last October 13.

Mr. Gadd died at the Benedictine Hospital from the injuries suffered when the car, owned by the Universal Road Machinery Co., collided with the abutment of the Higginsville bridge and overturned at an early morning hour as Gadd and Butler were returning to Kingston from Johnny Fisher's grill at West Hurley.

The other $100,000 action was that of Mrs. Mary M. Davison of Poughkeepsie against the doctors. It ended in a no cause of action verdict.

The Gadd action presents a rather unusual defense. The plaintiff's contention is that the car was being used by Butler with the express or implied consent of the corporation which owned it and that Butler was driving at the time of the crash. It is contended by the plaintiff that Butler admitted next day he was driving the truck when it crashed in the abutment on a slight turn in the road and then ran up on the fence and girder and turned over on its side.

Gadd was found lying some 15 feet behind the truck and Butler was in the car cab after the crash. The plaintiff claims that the position of the two men shows Butler was driving.

In contrast the defense claims that Butler had no authority to use the car and had no such permission that day and it is also contended that when the car left Fisher's between 3 and 4 o'clock in the morning Gadd was in the driver's seat and further that even though Butler did drive at the time of the accident that Gadd was guilty of contributory negligence in riding with a man whom he knew was under the influence of alcohol.

The defense claims that Butler was so intoxicated that he was unable to start the car at Fisher's place and that Gadd went to his assistance. In opening the case Judge A. J. Cook said it would be shown that Butler was so intoxicated that he fell asleep in the truck and that he was picked up and moved from behind the wheel in order that Gadd might take the wheel and drive the car. It is the defendant's contention that when the car left Fisher's Butler was still asleep and no one ever saw the two men after that until after the crash and it must be presumed that Gadd was still driving when the crash took place.

Dr. Van Haver appears for Mrs. Gadd. Judge A. J. Cook appears for the Universal Road Machinery Co. and Chris J. Flanagan for the defendant, Butler.

Butler was employed by the Universal Road Machinery Co. as purchasing agent and used the car in line of duty. Ownership of the truck is admitted but the company claims Butler had no permission to use it and when he did use it for his personal requirements he was given express authority.

On the day preceding the accident Gadd was at home painting. He left in the evening with friends, Robert Boyle, Thomas Feeney, William Barry and Stanley Petro and later stopped at Fisher's Grill. They remained there until closing time when Gadd remained with his friend Butler and the others returned to Kingston.

It was after 3 a. m. when Gadd and Butler left the Grill and started on their way home. The official record of the police of the time of the crash was about 4:10 o'clock. Mrs. O. Deitz of 1 Murphy street heard the crash of the car against the abutment. Police were summoned but it was found the crash was just outside the city and the sheriff's office was called. Gadd was taken to the hospital by the Conner ambulance and later died.

U. S. Offers Two Keels Are Ready Ships to Irish For Four Sweepers

Nation Also Would Give $500,000 in Food

Washington, May 20 (P)—President Roosevelt disclosed today that the United States had offered to sell or charter two ships to Ireland and to supply $500,000 worth of food for the Irish civilian population.

Mr. Roosevelt said the vessels could be placed under the Irish flag and that they probably would carry much more than $500,000 in food, indicating that Ireland intended to make purchases of her own.

Nothing has been done, he said, about supplying military equipment.

The Eire government for several weeks has been seeking maritime commission approval for the purchase of two ships in this country for transporting supplies to Ireland.

Robert Brennan, the Irish minister, said it was planned to purchase about a dozen ships in all if the maritime commission indicated approval.

Brennan declared that American officials did not raise the question of possible British use of Irish naval bases.

Committed to Thirty Days Jail for County

John Hicks, 30, Ellenville negro, arrested Saturday by Ellenville police on a disorderly conduct charge and held at the county jail, had a trial before Police Justice Herman Cohen Monday night. Hicks pleaded his own case, but was found guilty and committed to the county jail for 30 days.

Hicks claimed that about Christmas time he missed a pocketbook which had been in a bureau drawer at his home. He told the court that recently he saw the lost pocketbook in possession of a white woman who had formerly done laundry work for him at his home. He followed her to a house, but was refused admittance and the disorderly conduct charge arose out of the subsequent actions.

Several Arrested

For speeding 48 miles an hour on East Chester street, Albino Guerra of Paterson, N. J., was fined $5 today when he was arraigned before Judge Matthew V. Cahill in police court. James Rutledge of East Pierpont street and Joseph Young of Albany, both charged with failing to observe full stop signs, each forfeited bail when they failed to appear in court today in answer to the charge. Ralph Jackson of Schodack Landing, charged with public intoxication at the West Shore railroad baggage station, was fined $3 while Thomas Moran, who said he had no home, was given 30 days in jail, but the serving of the sentence was suspended, provided he was out of the city within an hour. Moran was charged with public intoxication.

Takes One Good Look

Perth Amboy, N. J., May 20 (P)—A young deer swam the sound from Staten Island today, romped about the business section, then leaped into the water and swam back to New York. Alex Olsen, president of the Perth Amboy Drydock Company, on the riverfront, was opening his safe when the bounding visitor dropped in through an open window, looked over the office, and departed through another window. There ensued a scamper along busy Broad and High streets, with police and the citizenry in pursuit; and finally a return to the waterfront, a last disdainful glance at Perth Amboy and back to a friendlier—perhaps—Staten Island.

Good Taste Today

PROPER RESERVE AS TO INTIMATE PERSONAL AFFAIRS CANNOT BE CONSTRUED AS UNTRUTHFULNESS

A situation which involves a very nice distinction between proper reserve and untruthfulness resolves itself into a question of point of view. The description is given in this letter:

"Considering the scarcity of money these days, I wonder whether I might be allowed to wear my deceased mother's diamond engagement ring. My fiancé can't afford to buy me one now, and as I have a diamond of my own I have never worn mother's ring. She died many years ago so I doubt if anyone would recognize the ring as having been hers."

If I were you I would have my fiancé give me a little guard ring to wear over my mother's ring. In this way, you would have a ring given you by him on your finger, and at the same time wear a ring for which you have an equally deep sentiment. You may perhaps explain to your few intimate friends whom you care for, but it is certainly unnecessary and not even in good taste to take everyone into your intimate confidence. The many curious who ask "Oh may I see your engagement ring" are politely answered by your holding out your hand.

This situation is one which concerns you alone, and your manner is not intended to deceive but merely an instinct, as it were, to shut the shutters upon your private life. Were a girl to ask others to look at her ring, or to boast of what her fiancé gave her and show them a diamond he had not given her, this would be very different behavior and would in fact be telling a plain lie.

A Letter for the Diet-Conscious

Dear Mrs. Post: My cook, who has been with me many years, wants me to ask you whether it is not impolite for my guests to sit at table and eat the filling and leave her extra special pastry? I tell her we have to expect this in these diet-conscious days, but she can not believe that people would carry their reducing diet lists to parties.

Answer: I can perfectly understand that it is disappointing to you, as well as discouraging to her, because pastry happens to be one of my own cook's specialties, and calory-counting the conversational topic of most of my friends.

I tell her we have to expect this in these diet-conscious days, but she can not believe that people would carry their reducing diet lists to parties.

Answer: Unless your marriage happens to be "news," and your ages are of definite interest to the public, there is no reason why the reporters should concern themselves about this. The only thing I know of—if you have reason to believe the press will be interested—is to tell the reporters "off the record" and ask them to help you keep it out of print.

No people in the world are more cooperative than the men and women of the press—if you cooperate with them.

Negotiations for the purchase of the site have been in progress for some time but were definitely concluded Saturday.

Exercise Can Bring Back "Lost" Youth and Beauty

Getting old? That double chin means only that you're getting soft!

Chin and neck exercises, you know, can vanquish a double chin, just as right exercises reduce fatty hips or a bulky tummy. When unused muscles are brought back to youthful firmness that "lost" beauty returns!

A simple daily chin routine, including this exercise, should do the job very nicely.

1—Turn your head sharply to the right until chin is over right shoulder. 2—Keeping chin over shoulder, tilt head backward slowly and lift face to ceiling. 3—Lower head slowly.

Repeat this 5 times, turn head to left and repeat. After a minute's rest, repeat exercise again until you've done it 20 times.

THE SACRED DAGGER

by Rita Mohler Hanson

Chapter Two The Dagger

THE man handed her a note. It was in her father's handwriting, but brief, constrained and disappointing in contents. She was to accept the ceremonial emblem, to go ahead as planned and everything would be all right. The telegram had been authentic then, and she recalled his warning not to be alarmed at anything strange in the Nagaras' behavior. They were a primitive but dependable people. Yet they had come late to meet her, and if it hadn't been for the appearance of the stranger, she might now be dead. She looked at them and waited.

"Are you ready?" the man asked. His voice was guttural, but he spoke the words slowly and plainly.

"I am," she said and stood up. They motioned her to sit down again. The man placed a bundle at her feet, a bundle such as she had seen American Indians carry wrapped in a shawl and tied by the four corners. He indicated she was to open it. Inside she found another wrapping of striped native homespun, tied in the same way. Then a third, and a fourth till she came to a silken cover at the sight of which they rose and stepped back cautiously.

Anne paused and looked up. She had heard a roar that differed from the roar of the telegraph. "Where is the airplane that is to take me to father's camp?" They shook their heads and motioned for her to go on with what she had begun. Carefully she unloosed the silken cloth. There lay a fold of leather; a belt, a sheath. She opened the flap. The hilt of a dagger. Her heart began to pound. So this was the Nagara emblem—a dagger?

She saw the natives were regarding her with curious, half fearful intensity like adults watching a child open a bee-hive—expecting the worst, yet not interfering.

The thing was a gorgeous piece of workmanship, gold and jade and turquoise with a figure of a man etched on it, a green eye in the middle of the forehead. This much you could see in the dim light.

"Take it—in your hand." For a moment the Nagara's perturbation infected her, then she grasped the hilt firmly, drew the dagger from the sheath. It set up a queer tingling in her hand as if, like an imprisoned bird, it thrived with life. She turned it over, transferred it to the other hand and back again. She ran her fingers along the slender bronze blade, a wonderful piece of ancient art and craftsmanship. Its beauty stirred her deeply. She pressed it to her breast in a little involuntary gesture of delight.

The pair of natives had crept closer. "Would you like—to kill yourself with the dagger?" The man asked softly. She stared at him. "No," she said explosively and held the handle to her cheek. "Seed of your father," he murmured, rose and waved the lantern. Other forms closed in about them and began lifting Anne's luggage to their backs. The man said, "Wear the dagger." Then she saw that three saddle horses had been brought up and opened her coat and fastened the belt around her waist.

"The camp—above the cliffs," said the man. "This place is bad." And you left me to wait," she reminded them indignantly. They regarded her with black, unfathomable eyes. "Strong people come to no harm in bad places." "Who was that white man?" "We know of no white man." They were not even curious. It gave her the most uncanny feeling. Nothing made sense any more. You just went ahead doing the thing that came to hand, trusting eventually to understand. Perhaps that was "surrender to Destiny."

Pete Mackey THE trip to the plateau above was not too difficult, though the natives had refused to touch Anne with a helping hand when she mounted and dismounted from the pony. She was given a clean mud hut with a pallet in one corner. The woman brought her warm water to wash in, then a bowl of tea and little fat cakes containing candied fruits and almonds and other seeds she could not identify.

She awoke in the morning with the happy thought, "I'll be at the dig tonight with father and mother and Philip Oliver." It would be the first time she'd seen Philip since she was a little girl. He'd been a college boy then and could use the biggest words. She wondered if ten years had changed him much.

The first thing she saw when she went out was the plane. An old-fashioned, open cockpit affair. A man in an olive green uniform had buried his head and shoulders under the hood.

"It's he," she thought, her pulses beginning to race a little. "The pilot's the man I talked to last night." Then she noticed there was not another human being in sight, nor a horse, nor another hut. Under a wing of the plane lay a pile of blankets and fur rugs, undoubtedly his bed.

"Hi!" she called, and started towards him. He pulled his head out from under the hood and jumped down and came to meet her, removing his billed cap. She had never seen him before. He was a slender fellow with bright blue eyes and a homely, weather-beaten face, and a touch of grey at the temples.

"I'm Mackey, Miss Willard," he called with a Montana drawl. "Pete Mackey. I'm to take you to your father's camp near Chuksa." She shook hands with him and presently asked, "Where are the natives?"

"They left last night. Funny people." "So father warned me." "They engaged me for this job and had me fly up here two days ago to be ready when you came. Kind of mysterious."

Anne agreed. She knew the quest of Shy-a Nago was being kept as quiet as possible and it depended upon Nagara cooperation. "Is there another white man with you?" she asked. "No," he grinned. "I'm my own mechanic." He had an engaging grin. She felt an immediate trust in him. For a moment she was tempted to tell him of her encounter of the night before, then refrained.

"I'll make you some tea and porridge," he said. "I didn't know I was going to have to feed a lady."

"Tea's quite ladylike," she smiled. "Not the way I make it," he grinned. "All I've got's native grub. I've been in the country so long I'm kind of used to it myself."

"It'll be good for me to get used to it, too." She wished she could ask him about himself. But she knew that Asia is dotted with white adventurers who do not talk about the past.

Rescue WHEN he finally got ready to tune up his motor, it refused to go, and it was noon before they started. "That's all right," he said. "We can make it in three hours and they told me there'd be an improvised landing field at your camp."

The plateau they were on finally privileged, both physically and emotionally, they do not know the meaning of "family living."

The speaker cited, for example, that 65,000 illegitimate babies were born in 1939; 250,000 children were referred to courts because of cruel treatment; and five million persons were poorly housed, poorly clothed, and underfed.

Children should be protected from the impact of the present war, she said, and added that young children should not even know that a war is going on. Children from four to seven or eight years of age, who are in the highly imaginative period, suffer most from knowing about war, in her opinion.

The best course to take with children who hear a great deal about the war is to answer their questions briefly, simply, and quietly, and with as much reassurance as possible.

"If the war talk is matter-of-fact, free from emotion, fear, and hatred, children who hear it will not react strongly. Adolescent boys and girls are ready to discuss world affairs."

If over a family should have its recreation together, this is the time, Miss Fowler stated. On picnics and hikes, and in other leisure-time activities, children are apt to reveal their interests and fears, and parents are more free from worry.

ran into a bare pinnacle-spiked range of mountains which separated them from another desert at a much higher elevation. It was above this that Mackey spied the wreck of the blue and gold airplane. Anne was in the fore cockpit. He touched her shoulder and pointed. They couldn't hear for the noise of the motor, yet she cried aloud, "There's someone waving to attract our attention."

Mackey circled. The plane was level but somewhat thickly grown with desert shrubs. He made a perfect landing within a few hundred yards of the other ship.

"That's a plane belonging to the government of Shani Lun," he said, and hopped out and ran to meet the other pilot.

"A Mongolian, then," thought Anne and watched them shake hands heartily before going on to load up with the other man's possessions.

She didn't recognize the stranger until he put down his burden and lifted his face. Mackey was declaring excitedly, "He's an old friend of mine, Miss Willard, an American. Call him Blaze. He's the luckiest guy that ever lived. An oil line went bad on him last night and he sat down here in the dark. The ship's a mess but he's hardly scratched." He shook his head wonderingly.

"How do you account for it, Blaze?" "Surrender to Destiny," grinned the other and looked at Anne with twinkling eyes, as if waiting to see if she would acknowledge having seen him before. That twinkle decided her, added to the turnaround he'd given her the night before, though he had probably saved her life. Perhaps now she was saving his. An airplane pilot. No wonder he'd laughed when she'd asked if he were a hermit.

"We're glad to be able to pick you up," she said. "Do you do this often?" He flushed a little. "I never did it before in my life, and I hope I never have to again."

Mackey laughed. "This crate'll be quite a comedown to you, Blaze, after that fancy little cabin job of yours."

"I can stand it," the other grinned and helped stow away his luggage.

Anneaved over to make room for him. It was a pretty tight squeeze. "I wonder if it would help any," he said, "if I'd hang my hands outside."

She laughed. She felt unreasonable. As Mackey taxied along for the rise, a stout limb of tamarisk shrub punctured the left wing fabric. They watched carefully but the rent seemed not to grow longer. And then the roar of the wind seemed to enshroud them.

Lecturer Will Talk On Judging Flower

Two-Day School Will Be Held at Cornell

Ithaca, N. Y., May 20—Persons interested in learning how to arrange flowers in the home, how to landscape the home grounds, and how to judge gardens and make garden exhibits, are invited to a two-day school on flower arrangement and flower show judging at Cornell University, Wednesday and Thursday, May 21 and 22.

Gerard Smith of New York city, florist, lecturer, and an authority on the art of arranging flowers, is the guest speaker this year. Those who attended the school will have a chance to practice flower arrangement and to exhibit their arrangements under his direction.

This practice period, it is pointed out, has always been a popular feature of the course. Members also learn how to judge the various flower classes, to identify spring flowers, to learn about design in gardens, garden exhibits, and landscaping the small home. Scheduled also are several talks and demonstrations, and a tour to see what is new in the Cornell test gardens and greenhouses.

The school, intended for beginners as well as those with experience, is sponsored by the department of horticulture and ornamental horticulture. The department provides all necessary equipment, including flowers, containers and holders.

More information and a copy of the program may be had from Dr. R. C. Allen, Room 20, Plant Science Building, Ithaca, New York.

Local Soldiers Now At Aeronautics School

Three men from Kingston and its vicinity who were stationed at Elgin Field, Fla., were recently transferred to the Casey Jones School of Aeronautics at Newark, N. J.

Those men who were among 40 to be sent to Casey Jones are: Peter J. Fabbie, son of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Fabbie of 239 Catherine street, Kingston; Leon W. Fisher, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Fisher of Hunter and Robert S. MacDaniel, son of Mrs. Anna MacDaniel of Bearsville.

These men who have been in the Army approximately four months, at the Air Corps Specialized Flying School at Elgin Field, are among the first men to be sent to schools under the new 100,000 a year mechanics program of the United States Army Air Corps. These volunteers are enrolled for the Airplane and Engine Mechanics Course, which was scheduled to begin May 19, 1941.

The Casey Jones School of Aeronautics, is one of several civilian schools contracted by the government to train men as specialists in the rapidly expanding United States Army Air Corps.

The Elgin Field men will return to their station after their course of instruction which will take approximately six months, and if they pass a written examination, will be certified Air Mechanics and will then be qualified as members of an Airplane crew in the Air Corps.

Progress made during the past year by official and non-official agencies to speed up the eradication of tuberculosis in upstate New York, setting the date at 1960, will be told by numerous conference speakers.

Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia of New York will address the luncheon, May 21, on the need for protective measures to prevent the exploitation of uniformed men and industrial defense workers by commercialized vice. Dr. Albert D. Kaiser of Rochester will describe medical examinations and corrective services for industrial defense workers.

George J. Nelbach of Yonkers, executive secretary of the state committee, will direct the conference.

Bern, Switzerland (AP) — The Swiss are looking for an ersatz for gasoline which is virtually unavailable here under wartime conditions. But the use of wood as fuel has increased because of coal shortage and Switzerland's forest are rapidly being depleted. Hence the federal council has passed a bill requiring a state examination of all motors for using wood—especially automobiles, trucks and tractors.

Links Family Morale With Strong Nation

Ithaca, N. Y., May, 20 A nation is strong to the extent that families whose morale is strong outnumber families whose morale is weak," members of a family-life, leadership-training school were told at Cornell University.

The speaker, Marie Belle Fowler, of the college of home economics, said a powerful nation is made up of first-rate family members who live democratically in the home. In this way, she added, people learn to live democratically in a larger society.

Sessions of the training school were attended by more than 500 representatives of family-life study groups, county leaders, and home demonstration, 4-H club, and county agricultural agents.

Miss Fowler urged all to contribute more to their own family life than they had ever done before, and to study community and national affairs to promote human welfare. Poise and courage in emergencies come through having met difficulties in ordinary everyday living and through reliance on self, she stated.

"Children should be allowed to take part in home activities. As they grow older, they should be encouraged to participate in plans for the common good, to listen and be heard in the family planning. We can also help children to know more about the country in which they live, its traditions and needs.

"Manual skills are valuable. Before he leaves the family home, every child should enjoy and know how to raise or prepare food, or make and care for clothing, or work with tools, or care for children, or clean and scrub the house, or any combination of these.

"Let us not forget that thousands of children have never had a chance to experience family living. They are weak because they lacked the heritage of being well-born and well-nurtured. Under-

Dodgers Protest Two Cub Wins; Recs Sign Joe Brodsky

Durocher Charges Chicago Has One Player Over Limit

Bruins Wallop Brooklyn by 14-1; A's Turn Back Indians, 5-4; Reds Beat Braves, 7-3

(By The Associated Press)
First-place jabs in the National League are as common as traffic tie-ups in Times Square, but the senior circuit has one now that only President Ford Frick can untangle.

The Brooklyn Dodgers have lost two games in a row at Chicago and yesterday slipped out of the percentage lead although remaining half a contest ahead of the St. Louis Cardinals on won-lost reckoning.

Dodgers Protest
However, the Dodgers complained this otherwise commonplace mixup by protesting both games on the grounds that the Cubs had 26 men on their squad, one over the limit that went into effect May 15.

The player in question is Outfielder Charley Gilbert, whom Brooklyn traded to the Cubs in the Billy Herman deal. He was playing under option at Montreal and the deal provided that the International League Club turn him over to the Cubs June 1.

In the meantime he sprained an ankle and went to Philadelphia to get repairs. He never has been any closer to Chicago than he is right now—roughly 800 miles.

President Frick says it may be a week before he can make a ruling. During the interim the protest not only will reflect on the first-place struggle between the Dodgers and Cardinals, but also on the Cubs, who moved into the first division yesterday.

If the Cubs don't cut off a man, and the protest is upheld a week from now, other managers may start hollering too. On the other hand the Dodgers will have to show why and how Gilbert can be included on the Cubs' roster 10 days before they themselves were due to deliver him.

Jim Gallagher, the Cubs' general manager, teased that question when he said: "We have not been notified that Gilbert has left Montreal and do not know what he is doing in Philadelphia. Whatever he is doing is his own business. All we know is that he is not yet a Cub."

Even if Brooklyn wins the protest it won't erase the humiliation of yesterday's 14-1 wallop. The Cubs climbed on chubby Hugh Casey, who had won five games without a defeat, and kayoed him with nine runs in the second inning. Claude Passeau, the Cubs' pitching ace, contributed a homer with the bases loaded in the big inning and choked the Dodgers with four-hit hurling. Bill Nicholson hit his seventh homer of the season with one on and Babe Phelps hit one for Brooklyn's lone run.

Indians Lose Again
Cleveland's American League leaders also were bumped off again by the Philadelphia Athletics, 5-4, although Al Milnar, the Indians' southpaw ace, homered with one on. Rookie Les McCrabb kept nine hits well-placed and was supported by a 12-hit offensive led by Frank Hayes.

Dennis Gahlehouse, who had pitched a shutout his last time out, held the New York Yankees to four safeties as the St. Louis Browns forged a 5-1 victory with the help of a couple of Yankee fielding miscues. New York's only run was a homer by Bill Dickey.

Young John Gorsica pitched four-hit ball for the Detroit Tigers to beat the Boston Red Sox, 4-2, missing a shutout in the seventh when Ted Williams homered with one on. It was Detroit's fifth straight win and kept the American League champs right on the heels of the second-place Chicago White Sox, who whipped the Washington Senators, 8-2. Fat Ed Smith gave Washington 10 hits, one more than the Sox obtained, but Chicago took advantage of seven walks and a hit batsman in wrecking Vernon Kennedy's debut in the capital.

Giants Are Stopped
The day's best pitching duel was in the National League where Pittsburgh ended the New York Giants' four-game winning streak, 2-1. Max Butcher of the Pirates allowed only four hits while old Carl Hubbell gave up six.

The Cincinnati Reds ripped off 11 hits to beat the Boston Braves, 7-3, behind Johnny Vander Meer, with Catcher Ernie Lombardi distinguishing himself by throwing out four runners at second. There were seven errors.

Talking Things Over

Before the Chicago White Sox go into action every day, either on the road or at home in Comiskey Park, here's the three men who form the board of strategy. Grouped left to right are Manager Jimmy Dykes, Coaches Mule Haas and Muddy Ruel. There three talk over the general outlook of the opposing club and then report to their players the strong and weak points of that certain team. The way the White Sox are traveling at present the board is working well. The Chicago Club is second in the American League, just six games behind Cleveland with 17 wins and 11 setbacks.

Sports Roundup

By EDDIE BRIETZ

New York, May 20 (The Special News Service)—Mid-western papers report that a full-fledged campaign is on to oust every athlete head at the University of Illinois, including Bob Zuppke. . . . Harmon won't play football with the pros, but he's not averse to playing against 'em—if the fee is fat enough. . . . Joe Cronin, tearing a page from Bill Terry's book, has barred the press from the clubhouse after the game. But no one is fretting. If the Sox keep going like they did last week, the scribes will see all they want of them on the field. . . . Bobby Jones will be the No. 1 gallerie again next month at the National Open.

Poor Old Bobo
The fans are asking if and when Buck Newsom's going to ride again.
It seems the Tigers' favorite son. So far this year but two has won. Which may be why the gossips say he blushes when he draws his pay.

Caught on The Fly
Of the six leading hitters yesterday in the two big leagues, four were shortstops—Travis, Jurgens, Cronin and Vaughan. . . . And those who think the Reds are through: Jimmy Wilson. . . . The North Carolina U. tennis team, which thought it had a national collegiate record with 51 straight wins, must go way back and sit down. Up to them the coachless U. of Arizona team with 53 in a row. (No wonder Tulane, Louisiana State and other big Dixie teams have reported "full schedules" to Spring Hill for three years now. . . . Lots of folks are wondering why the Cubs don't try to make a first-sacker out of Dizzy Dean. . . . Penn Military Institute will confer a degree of doctor of physical education on Connie Mack June 10 and it couldn't happen to a finer gentleman.

Today's Guest Star
Herbert Simons, Chicago Times: "Having pitched only one inning this season—the first against Pittsburgh, April 25, in which two Buccos tripled and another singled—Dizzy Dean thus gets 10 G's for an inning's work—a new high even for the era's most fabulous baseball fellow."

Sports Cocktail
Augie Galan may wind up with the Giants if the Cubs can prove he's sound of mind and limb. . . . U. of Arizona campus all agog over Billy Richey, 18-year-old freshman light-heavy who won the state amateur tournament with a string of consecutive kayos. . . . Gibson White's Hambletonian future book makes Bill Gallon the favorite at 2-1. His Excellency is next at 7-1 and Florimel third at 8-1. . . . Allie Stolz, the best looking fighter on last week's Garden card, who is being manager via remote control by Hymie Caplin in Sing Sing, may wind up in the Al Weil stable.

St. Looney Lulu
Frank Crespi out on second base. Looks like an up and coming ace. But Redbird rooters only wish That he'll be half as good as Frisch.

One Minute Interviews
Kingfish Levinsky: "I want another fight with Louis. . . . All Louis does is fight bums. . . . And ain't I a bum?"

Johnny Vander Meer, the Dutch Master of Double No-Hit Fame, averaged nearly a strikeout an inning in his first 50 innings this season, putting him far out in front in the race for the 1941 strikeout championship of the National League, thanks to that fast curve of his, called by experts the best southpaw curve in baseball, and by opposing players, "Vandy's Vanisher." Chances for the Cincy Reds' ace southpaw to repeat the no-hit exploit which made him the talk of the baseball world in 1938 loomed brighter when he strung together with 11 successive no-hits in parts of games pitched against the Cubs and Pirates, the last six innings of his Cub game and the first six of his next start against Pittsburgh.

Besides setting the season's high in winning streaks with their 10 straight which finally came to grief in Boston May 6, the St. Louis Cardinals set a new modern record by winning their first 12 games played away from home. Until the Braves snapped the streak the Red Birds had played 1,000 per cent ball on the road, 12 and 0, as against 500 per cent on their home grounds, 3 and 3.

There is still room for any bowlers who desire to get on a team, and if they so desire, may do so by leaving their name at the Central Recreation alleys.

Kelley Passed Up 'Permanent Job' To Start 47-Year Baseball Career

Minneapolis—Forty-seven years ago young Michael Kelly cornered his father and told him he thought he'd quit college and make baseball his career.

"Michael," his father said, "what you want to do is your own business. You can take up baseball if you like, but I was hoping you'd get into something permanent."

That was three years short of a half century ago, and Mike could be excused now for wondering just what his father meant by permanency. Mike, owner of the Minneapolis Millers, has been in baseball ever since that day.

He might be called the (say it slowly, please) Cornelius McGillicuddy of the minors. Connie Mack is the oldest man in the majors in point of service. Minneapolis Mike, at 65, holds that distinction in the minors.

Mike doesn't do any scorecard waving from the dugout, though, or make any appearances on the field. Most of his club work is confined to the front office, but he has some pretty definite ideas about the modern game—not all complimentary. Says he: "There just isn't as much baseball played these days. Not as much inside ball. They don't run the bases as much and while the game is faster mechanically there is too much reliance on long hitting."

The game's still fascinating, though, Mike asserts, despite recent crowd-getting maneuvers of which he doesn't exactly approve. He was the last American Association magnate to yield to night

Hudson Receiver Will Start Season With Team Sunday

Locals Also Obtain Gene Rider; Recs to Launch Campaign Sunday in Copake Falls

With the opening game less than a week away, Manager Joe Hoffman was finally given some good news concerning his Kingston Recreations last night when it was announced that Joe Brodsky, Hudson catcher, had been signed by the locals.

Brodsky's agreement to play with the Recs this summer ended a long siege of phone calls to all parts of this district on the part of Kingston to land a big-time receiver. Brodsky is regarded as one of the best in the business. He played with Albany in the Twilight League last season.

After the season had been completed upstate Brodsky had protected a .413 batting average, won the most valuable player award and finished off by being elected honorary captain of the annual all-star aggregation.

Gene Rider Signs
Before any word was received concerning Brodsky's signing, the Recreations obtained veteran Gene Rider to play with the club. Gene hasn't seen much action behind the plate in a number of years but his acquisition gives the Recs a double quantity of experienced backstoppers.

The two Middletown players, Abe Masci, second sacker and Al Proia, southpaw hurler, came to terms over the week-end. Joe Hoffman has announced. Masci is a rival to George McLean for the keystone sack while Proia seems to fit well in the Recs' hurling staff.

Further news regarding the Recreations was received from Charlie Neff, New Paltz hurler, who has told the locals that he will not be able to report until after the school semester ends. However, the Recs will have the services of Al Proia, Bob Bush and Jimmy Martin to work with. Martin has joined the Recs after a

Joe Louis Claims He'll Stop Boxing After September
New York (Special)—"I've got to quit for sure this year," Joe Louis was quoted in a popular magazine story today. "Guess about next September will be my last. That Michigan ranch is just achin' to have me spend more time on it."

The magazine article said Promoter Mike Jacobs and Managers John Roxborough and Julian Black mapped the fight-a-month campaign to collect all the easy money before their gold mine quit operating.

"Louis has admittedly been tending on soft touches, and he naturally has softened up," said Gene Kessler, writer of the article. "This hasn't been especially noticeable because Joe has met only harmless punchers since Tony Galento. Mike Jacobs almost swallowed his store teeth when Tony put Joe on the floor."

"Promoter Jacobs is rushing Billy Conn into a title swirl with Louis even before Conn is a full-grown heavyweight. Jacobs fears the Bomber is on the verge of slipping suddenly. If anyone beats Louis, Mike Jacobs wants the one to be Conn — the second largest link in the Jacobs tin-can chain gang."

The article went on to say that Louis was expected to knock out Conn, then make a last stand maybe against Lou Nova, recent conqueror of Max Baer. "That is, unless Joe is persuaded that he can collect $300,000 for another easy year of conking popovers who can't hit hard enough to give a headache."

Good Season Across the River in 1940.
Copake Falls Sunday
Ready to start the 1941 campaign Sunday afternoon the Recs will be in Copake Falls to play the strong team of that section. The Fallsmen always have been a tough crew for any Kingston team and this year aren't expected to be any different. No definite battery or lineup has been announced by Manager Joe Hoffman for this opening tussle.

However, Kingston might take the field with Bing Van Etten, first; George McLean on second; Andy Cluch on third and Charlie "Frenchy" Francello at short. The outfield will have Mac Tiano, Vince Smedes and Bill Thomas. Joe Brodsky and possibly Jimmy Martin will form the battery.

Regardless of whether the pitchers are ahead of the hitters or the hitters ahead of the pitchers, in the National League this year the pitchers are so far ahead of themselves as hitters compared to 1940 that it's no contest. No National League moundsman had more than one homer for the whole season last year. This year Big Louisiana Lee, of the Chicago Cubs, hit two in one afternoon in Philadelphia, the Cubs last port of call on their May eastern trip.

Building Boom in City Noted in Gregory Report

Kingston is experiencing a building boom in the erection of a number of houses in various sections of the city, according to the annual report of Plumbing Inspector Charles H. Gregory. There were 49 new houses erected in the city during 1940, and this year there are 35 new houses now under construction.

The plumbing inspector said that the houses built or in the course of construction in Kingston are made to sell at prices ranging from $4,000 to $7,500.

The majority of the new houses erected in the city last year and under construction so far this year are small six-room houses with all modern improvements. Many of the houses have garages attached.

Mr. Gregory said that the erection of new houses was not confined to any one particular section of the city, but were widely scattered with groups of houses being erected in various new sections that have been developed in late years.

Ulster County Day At Firemen's Home In Hudson Sunday

Ulster County Volunteer Firemen will provide their annual entertainment treat at the Firemen's Home in Hudson on Sunday, June 1, at 2 p. m. Ten of the 190 members at the home are from Kingston.

A variety bill of entertainment has been selected for the occasion and a large delegation of firemen from the county is expected to make the trip.

Delegates, members of the various fire companies and their friends who plan to make the trip will meet at the gate entrance at 2 o'clock and march into the home headed by the Saugerties Drum Corps.

Those at the home from Ulster county will be given a special gift by the Ulster County Volunteer Firemen's Association. Superintendent William J. Coleman and Mrs. Coleman of the home have set aside June 1 for the exclusive use of the firemen from Ulster county and the public is invited to see the program. The public will also have an opportunity to inspect the home and the firemen's museum, maintained by the volunteer firemen of the state of New York.

The program has been made up of talent provided through efforts of the various companies of the county.

The committee in charge, due to limitations, was unable to include all the acts on the bill, but selected what it considers a program which will be well received by those at the home and the public.

The committee in charge is composed of John A. Heaney, chairman, of Kingston; John T. Groves and Edward F. Maines of Port Jervis; Phil Fischer, Sr., of St. Remy; Harold B. Denike of Saugerties; Albert Casdollar, Woodstock; Charles Turner of New Paltz; David Hillson of Phoenicia; Chief J. L. Murray, Edward F. Moran, J. Radel, Fred Harder and Frank J. Wynne of Kingston.

Ulster County Firemen meeting will be held tonight with the Centerville Fire Company in Centerville. The guest speaker will be Assemblyman John Wadlin. Refreshments will be served after the meeting.

GRANGE NEWS

Rosendale

The meeting of the Rosendale Grange, No. 1501, was held at the Grange Hall, Monday, May 12, with the worthy master, Clyde Baxter, Sr., presiding. All officers were present but one. This meeting was history-making for Granges in the state.

At this meeting 55 new members received the third and fourth degrees. It is believed to be the first time for this amount of members to receive the degrees in a Grange in New York state.

Master Baxter feels that the effects put forth to obtain this large class are well rewarded and in this the 75th anniversary, the diamond jubilee year of the Grange, this large class is a fine tribute to the founders of the Grange organization.

Much praise should be given Sister Evelyn Kennedy and her degree team for the manner in which they conducted their drills and degree work. The hall was beautifully decorated with trees and boughs to give forth the resemblance of winter. Messrs. Hahn, Thorpe, Deitz and Baxter, Jr., did the decorating.

Worthy Deputy Brother Harold W. Story was present and gave an interesting talk. He spoke to the new members on the degrees they had received, also about Pomona, State and National Grange.

He congratulated Master Baxter on his success of having such a large class of new members and also congratulated the degree team for its work.

After the meeting a dinner was served in the dining room after which the lecturer, Brother Hahn, invited everyone to view a motion picture entitled "Singing Wheels," which was enjoyed by all.

The service and hospitality committee will hold a card party on Friday, May 23.

forced to adopt some form of the compulsory measures in use in both Britain and Germany.

Crawford said one such plan had been "kicking around" in administration circles since it was suggested by Isador Lubin, commissioner of labor statistics. It would provide, he said, that all defense contracts carry a provision requiring the employer to deduct from each worker's pay a certain percentage which would be held for the worker until some future date, possibly the end of the emergency, and arbitrarily invested in defense bonds in the meantime.

U. S. Releases Princess, Keeps Watchful Eye

San Francisco, May 20 (AP) — Princess Stephanie Hohenlohe, whose colorful career before the war included acquaintance with many key figures in continental political intrigue, was free to go about her own affairs today, but with a watchful governmental eye upon her.

Maj. Lemuel B. Schofield, head of the U. S. Immigration Service in Washington, released her personally last night from the immigration station where she had been incarcerated since March 8 awaiting deportation for overstaying on visitor's permit. So far the government has not found a country willing to accept her.

"I am very happy—it has been a long time," she murmured.
